

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFACE

The present attempt at a Local Bibliography is the outcome of twelve years' collection and study of the subjects which lie within its scope. The Rev. David Imrie, of Free (now United Free) St. Andrew's Church, Dunfermline, has given much attention to a similar project for a period of twice this duration,—from the time, indeed, that he came to Dunfermline in 1876,—with the natural result that he has brought together a very fine local library (now placed in the Dunfermline Archæological Museum), including many items which it would be practically impossible to duplicate. The compiler of this list wishes prominently to acknowledge his indebtedness to Mr. Imrie for the free communication of much acquired knowledge, and also for the assistance given by sympathy in pursuit, often shown in a very practical form.

This list is in reality merely a catalogue, and as such (like a dictionary) will furnish proverbially dry reading. Foot-notes have been freely added, containing the outlines of such information as could be gathered from authentic sources, in regard to the authors named,—particularly so in the case of those who are no longer with us.

The contents being, as has been said, merely a catalogue, require all the more attention by way of preface. And a more promising field, in capable hands, could scarcely be desired in that respect. The district included is, roughly speaking, the West of Fife,—from Burntisland to Kincardine, east and west, and from Cleish to the Forth, north and south. Culross and Kincardine are really in Perthshire (although for more serious purposes than the present included in Fifeshire), while Cleish,† now in the county of Kinross, was formerly in Fife.

Within the above district it is nothing less than surprising to find that, whether from birth or domicile, so many eminent writers can be claimed;—even after making allowance for exceptional cases such as King James VI. of † It must be admitted that the somewhat arbitrary inclusion of the parish of Cleish is due to the former existence there of the interesting Blairadam private press.

Scotland (for more than occasional residence), Rev. Robert Moffat, D.D., the African missionary (for a year at Donibristle), Rev. George Skene Keith, D.D. (who lived only eight months after being inducted parish-minister of Tulliallan), and perhaps especially, the Rev. Charles Rogers, D.D., so copious a writer, who, for less than a year, held the charge of the North Parish, Dunfermline, and was afterwards, for a similar period, assistant at Ballingry. The inclusion of these, as of others, may seem to invite criticism. It can only be replied that the difficulty was recognised, and an endeavour made to meet it, by transferring these names (with a very few exceptions, such as James VI.) into an Appendix C, which comprises authors who were not natives of the locality, and whose connection therewith was not more than comparatively transitory.

No items are included with regard to King Robert the Bruce other than those relating to his Tomb and reinterment, although his son (afterwards David II.) was born at Dunfermline in 1324, and the town (or rather the Palace, if it then existed) was at that period a Royal residence, in more than empty title. King Charles I. (like his father, King James) has also presented a real difficulty as to treatment, since the subject could, at will, be almost indefinitely expanded. Still, he takes precedence as Dunfermline's most conspicuous native, and whatever were his faults (a question not very germane to our standpoint of Literature), it will now be generally acknowledged, speaking candidly and in measured terms, that he was treated by his opponents with—to say the very least—unwarrantable barbarity. Cromwell and his apologist, Milton, with all extenuations, do not clear themselves from this charge.

The West of Fife has certainly contributed its share towards the formation of the national character, and possesses many links connecting it with the Ecclesiastical and Civil history of our country.

The very earliest local author, whose name definitely appears in these pages,<sup>1</sup> is Walter Bower, Abbot of Inchcolm, who wrote a continuation of Fordun's Scotichronicon, and died about the middle of the fifteenth century. Not fifty years later, we have the first thoroughly-vouched author who belonged to Dunfermline itself,—Robert Henryson, notary, and apparently also schoolmaster in the "auld grey toun,"—to whom we are indebted for the Testament of faire Creseide, a sequel or supplement to Chaucer's famed Troilus and Cressida, as also for Robene and Makyne (the earliest specimen of Scottish pastoral poetry), in addition to other separate works. Henryson died about the year 1506, and the sixteenth century naturally brings a larger store of writers. Prominent among these are the brothers Adam and Henry Blackwood, both of whom all authorities agree in stating to have been born at Dunfermline, although, as is mentioned in the notes under their names, the locality is thus perhaps too precisely defined. There seems, however, to be not the slightest doubt that they were born in the immediate neighbourhood, and probably this is all that can be now said. In regard to these and many other early writers, it has often been very misleading to find every available authority agree in a certain definite statement, while, after all, the testimony is by no means independent, but in each instance gathered from the self-same source, if not even by percolation from that source after having been filtered upon the way through successive books of reference. Of the works of Henry Blackwood it has not been found possible to locate any existing specimen, although, fortunately, the writings of his younger brother, Adam (Queen Mary's chivalrous defender), if decidedly scarce, are not altogether beyond reach. It is interesting to note the connection of these Blackwoods with the ancestry of the Marquis of Dufferin and Ava, who has most kindly rendered assistance upon this special point.

About the same period, we have the Rev. Robert Pont, born at Shiresmill, the author of several separate items, and also a contributor (upon chronology) to the preface of the famous Bassandyne Bible, the first Bible printed in Scotland. As is incidentally mentioned, yet another local man, George Young, servant to the Abbot of Dunfermline, was engaged in the revision of the proofs of this important work.

Towards the close of this (the sixteenth) century come the names of two interesting personages,—the Royal author, King James VI.,<sup>1</sup> who, at the age of eighteen, published The Essays of a Prentise, in the Divine Art of Poesie (1584), afterwards followed by numerous other volumes, poetical, theological, and political; and the Rev. David Fergusson, parish-minister of Dunfermline (as it is stated, a personal friend of his King), who only published two sermons in his lifetime, but also left a valuable collection of Scottish Proverbs, not printed until more than forty years after his death. The Rev. David Fergusson is again represented in this catalogue in the persons of his son-in-law, the Rev. John Row of Carnock, and of his grandson (also the Rev. John Row), minister of Aberdeen, and a noted Hebrew scholar. Both of these Rows shared in the production of a Historie of the Kirk of Scotland, which indeed is said to have been founded, as to its earlier years, upon papers left by Mr. Fergusson.

It is unnecessary in this place to recount the names of our other sixteenth-century authors, and still more so, to follow the same course with those of times which more nearly approach the present.

Some notice, however, must be taken of the prominent part which the West of Fife has played in the Ecclesiastical History of Scotland, and especially during the earlier years of what has been, until quite recently, the United Presbyterian Church. This, under the name of the Associate Presbytery, was founded as a Secession from the Establishment (upon the vexed question of patronage) by the Rev. Ebenezer Erskine (of Stirling) and three other parish-ministers, at Gairney Bridge, Kinross-shire, 5 Dec. 1733. The Rev. Ralph Erskine (brother of the real originator of this Secession, and senior parish-minister of Dunfermline from 1716) did not formally join the new movement, in which he afterwards became a leading light, until Feb. 1737. Ten years later, in 1747, occurred "The Breach," when the new Church divided itself into the "Original Associate" (or Burgher) and the "General Associate" (or Anti-Burgher) Synods upon the lawfulness of taking the Burgess Oath, which had been imposed by Parliament in 1745. The separate congregation of Anti-Burghers in this district had at first its place of meeting in Cairneyhill, although by the year 1789 the Dunfermline members built for themselves a new church in Chalmers Street.

In 1752 (or, more strictly speaking, in 1761, when the Presbytery was formed) another Secession from the Establishment was founded by the Rev. Thomas Gillespie of Carnock (with two other parish-ministers) under the name of the Relief Church. The primary cause of this separation was the forced settlement of the Rev. Andrew Richardson in the parish of Inverkeithing, although why the new Seceders did not join with the Burghers (or Original Associate Church) does not now, to an outsider, seem very clear; except that the Relief Church held most tenaciously to the principle of Establishment, and indeed "did not consider themselves as Seceders," to quote their own expression.

In 1799-1806 took place a further division within the Original Secession; in 1799 among the Burghers, and in 1806 among the Anti-Burghers; viz., the "New Lights" and the "Old Lights." This, in the case of the Original Associate (Burgher) Church, was caused by an "Explanatory Statement" issued by its Synod in 1797, giving a new explanation or interpretation of certain tenets. The subject is a most intricate one, but it would appear that the "Old Lights" (locally the "Auld Lichts")<sup>1</sup> were the more conservative section who maintained their principles,—to the very letter,—as formulated by the Original Secession of 1733. This "Old Light" Kirk was in a decided minority, and never (as a body) conformed to the United Secession or to the later United Presbyterian Church; its much larger portion, indeed, re-uniting with the Establishment in 1839. A remnant exists independently to this day (presumably a combination of "Old Light" Burghers and Anti-Burghers) as a small sect under the name of the "United Original Seceders" or "Original Burgher Secession," with four presbyteries and some twenty congregations, two of the latter being in Ireland.

To return—after this digression upon the "Auld Lichts" and "New Lights," an abstruse subject which it was perhaps rash to attempt,—the division between the Burghers and Anti-Burghers over the Burgess Oath was healed (so far as the "New Lights" were concerned) in 1820 by a combination under the name of the United Secession Church;

<sup>1</sup> The "Original Burghers" or "Auld Lichts" built in 1800 a small chapel in Canmore Street, Dunfermline, upon the site now occupied by the (United) Free Abbey Church, and had two ministers in succession,—Rev. John Campbell (ordained Sept. 1806, d. Jan. 1810, in his twenty-eighth year), and Rev. William Dalziel (Oct. 1815-1843);—in 1839 united (under Mr. Dalziel) as a quoad sacra charge into the Established Church. (As to Rev. John Campbell, see a pamphlet under PATTON, David).

There was yet another controversy between "Lifters" and "Non-Lifters" in the Anti-Burgher Church, upon a point of Ritual observance, which resulted, in 1785, in the separation of three congregations of "Lifters,"—at Kilmaurs, Falkirk, and Leith.

while with 1847 came a further union, when the Secession and Relief Churches coalesced into one United Presbyterian Church, which consistently maintained its original protest against lay patronage. In addition to this, Voluntaryism had, from the time of the "General Associate" or Anti-Burgher Synod, gradually acquired a hold upon the U.P. Church, which, in Oct. 1900, amalgamated with the Free Church into the United Free Church of Scotland. At the date of this most recent Union, Dunfermline had four strong churches of the U.P. and three of the Free Church.

With a record of Secessions such as this, none will be surprised that the literature of Dunfermline and of its immediate neighbourhood,—especially for the hundred years commencing about 1733,—is largely, or even mainly, composed of sermons and religious treatises, together with an abundant leaven of controversy upon ecclesiastical differences. An exceedingly large proportion of the names of authors herein noted are those of ministers of religion, representing creeds of almost all shades.

Our list sweeps its net far, and includes, in addition to divines by the score, "all sorts and conditions of men";—kings, nobles, warriors by land and sea, celebrities in politics, law, medicine, and science, and men of almost every occupation down to the humble hawker (once a Culross collier) who wrote, and sold from door to door, his own "Life, Adventures, and Experience," in addition to making verses "on any subject, if employed."

A catalogue of this nature can offer no pretence to be exhaustive, and notwithstanding every care which is exercised, must necessarily contain errors of omission,—and even errors of commission. The former, indeed, must be numerous, so obscure is the veil which, without a doubt, hides many who would gladly be welcomed as ranking within the present scheme. Such has been proved to demonstration by the casual way in which the names of various local authors have been disclosed, thus leaving the assurance that patience, combined with opportunity, could yet add many to the list.

In the attempt to cover a period of five hundred years, with references to almost an equal number of individual authors, it may well be understood that some of these last must come into a category to be classed (from the standpoint of local connection) as distinctly "doubtful." In all such cases this has been duly recognised in the foot-notes. A few other instances occur where the link, although certainly existent, may not be a very close one. These have generally been dismissed, but it was thought advisable to include brief notices of some important authors who come into this class, among whom may here be mentioned Bishop Hacket of Lichfield and Coventry (apparently a near connection of the Pitfirrane family); the Moultries of Rescobie; and the Welwoods of Touch, Garvock, and Pitliver. No attempt, however, has been made to include the works of such writers in the catalogue, but merely a record of their names and connection with its more immediate scope.

Dunfermline is not lacking in local Histories, of which we have Patton's (rather a jeu d'esprit than a serious work), Fernie's, Mercer's, Chalmers', and Henderson's. Of these, by far the most valuable is Chalmers', which, the more it is scrutinized, the more it shows the marks of painstaking and accurate research. It is to be regretted, however, that this author, when issuing his second volume in 1859, did not incorporate the first volume (of 1844) into a revised edition by combining both. The second volume resolves itself into a running commentary upon the first, with the result of making each less useful. At the same time it is hardly possible to give too much credit to Dr. Peter Chalmers for what he achieved.

A brief notice of Dunfermline printers is annexed, from which it would appear that specimens of local typography may be expected to exist from so early a date as 1762. About that period there were certainly several booksellers in the town, as is evidenced by the imprints upon some of Ralph Erskine's sermons; but at the present day no specimen of Dunfermline printing seems to be known anterior to the year 1800.

The compiler must express his sincere thanks to the numerous correspondents who have given him ready and cordial assistance. Information has had to be sought (and obtained) from many places, including our South African and Australian Colonies. Acknowledgment has already been rendered to the Rev. David Imrie, and (not to attempt to enumerate others) very special thanks are also due to Mr. John B. Mackie, now of Middlesbrough, who has given invaluable aid and encouragement. The wood-cut by David Patton, facing p. 228, is included through the kindness of Mr. James Adams.

1 CHRONOLOGICAL LIST OF DUNFERMLINE
PRINTERS.

" (east of the Cross) as early as 1762," (Henderson's Annals, p. 477).
- "MR. CRERAR, Bookseller and Stationer, High Street,

" menced printing," 1783, (Ibid., p. 512, also Chalmers' History, vol. i., p. 548).
- [Of neither of the above is any work known to survive].

<sup>1</sup> This list is confined to Dunfermline and Charlestown. There formerly existed private presses at Blairadam and Burntisland, (see under ADAM, Rt. Hon. William; BURNTISLAND; and FORBES, Rev. George Hay; all in the main catalogue following). At Kincardine there has been at least one printer by trade, and another who seems to have been an amateur. Lochgelly has now two newspaper and jobbing presses, and Burntisland two of the latter and minor class.

<sup>2</sup> M'Kerrow (in his History of the Secession Church, 1845 edition, p. 144) mentions a Gavin Beugo, probationer in the Established Church, as joining the Secession, July 1739. This was evidently the Gavin Beugo (named in Rogers' The Book of Robert Burns, vol. i., p. 35, as "a licentiate of the church, resident in Edinburgh") descended from a Linlithgow family, and father of John Beugo, who is well known as the engraver of Nasmyth's portrait of Burns.

There was also a James Beugo, bookseller in Dunfermline from at least 1729-1752, (see later, under DUNFERMLINE,—PRINTED FOR; and ERSKINE, Rev. Ralph), no doubt identical with the Ruling Elder of the same name who represented Dunfermline in the Associate Synod of Sept. 1746, (Acts and Proceedings of the Associate Synod, 1747, under DUNFERMLINE,—PRINTED FOR).

The Rev. John Beugo, from Dunfermline, was ordained minister of the Secession Church at Dunning, Aug. 1780, and d. Oct. 1805, in his sixty-second year, (Mackelvie's Annals and Statistics of the United Presbyterian Church, p. 616). An Act of Parliament, 1811, mentions a house on the north side of the High Street, Dunfermline, "belonging to the Heirs of the late John Bewgo, Minister of the Gospel," (Henderson's Annals, p. 573).

In 1835, James Beugo and Alexander Beugo were manufacturers in Dunfermline, (The Dunfermline Register, 1836), and there was a James Beugo of 69 High Street in 1858, (Dunfermline Monthly Advertiser).

- D. RICHARDSON certainly printed at Dunfermline in the year 1800, if not also earlier, (see p. 96, postea).
- <sup>1</sup> ANDREW ANGUS, merchant, commenced printing in 1802 "with a small printing-press made under his directions by a townsman," (Henderson's Annals, p. 549: see postea, p. 85, Abridged History of the Society of Gardeners, 1816).
- <sup>2</sup> JOHN MILLER, 1804-1834; afterwards JOHN MILLER AND SON, 1835-ca. 1863. Mr. Miller commenced printing in the house at the south-west corner of Abbey Park Place in 1804, (Henderson's Viagraphia, p. 3), but afterwards removed to Bridge Street, where the bookshop and Circulating Library existed until about the year 1863. John Miller d. March 1852, aged seventy-four. From about 1812-1850 his was a very active press.
- DAVID PATTON, from 1810-1826, (Henderson's Annals, pp. 569, 653), had a press at which he printed "many little books," including at least five of his own authorship, (see under his name, 1811-ca. 1822).
- JAMES LOTHIAN, teacher, Charlestown (b. at Dunfermline), "invented and constructed a small printing press,

<sup>2</sup> It seems evident that John Miller was nearly related to another contemporary printer of the same surname,—George Miller of Dunbar and Haddington, (imprint G. Miller, 1811; George Miller & Son, 1813; this latter upon the title-page of "The Cheap Magazine," a monthly very similar in character to the "Cheap Tracts," 1826-1829, issued by John Miller of Dunfermline: and indeed George Miller printed a series of twenty "Cheap Tracts," Dunbar, 1802-1803). One of John Miller's publications,—Johnstone's "An English Collection, &c.," 1812,—bears the imprint "Sold by . . . G. Miller & Son, Haddington"; and two others,—"Persecution of Protestants," 1816, and R. K. Douglas' "A Concise History of the Bible," 1817,—were "sold by G. Miller, Dunbar."

George Miller was an author, having written his "Latter Struggles in the Journey of Life, &c." (Edin. 1833), besides two volumes entitled "Popular Philosophy," &c., Dunbar, 1826. He was born, Jan. 1771; opened a Circulating Library at Dunbar, Nov. 1789 (the firm-name being at that period J. & G. Miller); and individually there started in 1795 the first East Lothian press, which he afterwards removed to Haddington, ca. 1805-1810. He appears to have continuously resided at Dunbar, which was still frequently used as his imprint.

"which had a peculiarly powerful motion. The press was used privately for printing elementary school-books . . . . for the general use of the school and the village," (Henderson's Annals, p. 580). In 1813 he left for Alloa, of which town he was the first printer, and where he became, in 1841, editor and proprietor of the Alloa Advertiser. D. July 1862, aged eighty-one. See under his son's name, postea, pp. 308-309; also at p. 81, "Regulations of the Weavers' Prices of Dunfermline," 1812.

WILLIAM MELDRUM, teacher, Nethertown, was also a printer from 1813-1844, (Henderson's Annals, p. 582; and Chalmers' History, vol. i., p. 549). See postea, pp. 79, 85 (1815-1823); also p. 166 (1830-1836); and sundry other items which are noted as of doubtful origin, 1818-ca. 1832.

WILLIAM LIDDELL was a local printer from 1833-1835, in which year he left the parish, (Chalmers' History, vol. i., p. 549). See postea, pp. 76, 85, 109, 217 (1833-1834).

THE "PRESS" OFFICE was founded in April 1859, and has done much work. Since the year 1866 its imprint has been variously "Press" Office, "Saturday Press" Office, and A. Romanes, the last-named being the proprietor during that period, until his death in Sept. 1900.

ANDREW KER, bookseller, Moodie Street, published an Almanac annually for fifteen or twenty years, commencing in 1863. He also issued, in 1868, two or three numbers of a small newspaper—"The Rock." Mr. Ker has latterly been manager of Mr. Romanes' book-shop in High Street.

JOSEPH HENDERSON was a printer at the Cross, High Street, from about 1867-1875. See postea, p. 86; and p. 180.

DAVID THOMSON, 27 Chalmers Street, printed for a short period ca. 1880. See postea, p. 112,—the re-issued "Dunfermline Monthly Advertiser"; and p. 200, under MACDONALD, James.

"DUNFERMLINE CITIZEN" OFFICE, Chalmers Street (L. MACBEAN), from about the year 1885. The newspaper is printed at Kirkcaldy, but some minor work is executed at Dunfermline.

DAVID WATT, Queen Anne Street, has had several presses at work, commencing about 1895; chiefly upon commercial work. See postea, pp. 56, 72.

BOOKSELLERS.

The Laing Collection of MSS. in the University Library, Edinburgh, includes (Item 752) "Account books of Booksellers in . . . Dunfermline, 1770."

During the half-century previous to this date the names of several Dunfermline booksellers are to be noted:—

Mrs. Meldrum, 1724-1728.
Robert Beveridge, 1729.
James Beugo, 1729-1752.
John Horn, 1764.

(See under DUNFERMLINE,—PRINTED FOR; and ERSKINE, Rev. Ralph).

In 1835, John Davidson and James Bonnar were booksellers in Dunfermline, (The Dunfermline Register, 1836). J. Davidson, 12 High Street, advertised the sale of his stock in Jan. 1838; he was an auctioneer in 1839, and d. Dec. 1859. James Bonnar was of 67 High Street in 1845, and left Dunfermline six years later. W. Main was a bookseller at 17 High Street in 1842, (Monthly Advertiser); and William Ross, 121 High Street, was selling off in 1862, (Ibid.) John Henderson, bookseller, 51 High Street, published the Dunfermline Chronicle, of which the first number appeared 22 April 1853. This newspaper was printed in Edinburgh, and existed for about three years. Mr. Henderson had no press, but a number of books and pamphlets were printed for him, although no details are obtainable. See also note under his son's name, HENDERSON, William.

EXPLANATORY NOTE.

WHERE an author's name is enclosed within curved brackets, the work is anonymous; and when square brackets are used, the item is not by the person mentioned, but is either concerning him or bears special reference to his writings,—e.g., by way of reply.

Italics in the titles of main entries denote cross-references. In such cases the same item may be noted under two (or more) headings, but invariably it is fully catalogued in one place only.

Dashes are used to repeat an author's name, whether in the outer column or in the body of the entry itself.

With regard to the orthography, it seems hardly necessary to refer to the fact that some of the title-pages of works included in this catalogue are embellished by spelling of an arbitrary, or even of an eccentric, character. It has been the compiler's endeavour always to follow the exact titles, verbatim et literatim.

Great difficulties have naturally arisen over the system to be adopted for indexing. Briefly stated, authorship (when strictly local) has been first considered; secondly, subject; and lastly, failing these qualifications, the fact of emission from a local press.

Of many of the works catalogued the compiler does not possess a copy; but of these there are very few indeed which do not occur either in the Museum of the Dunfermline Archæological Society, in the Advocates' or Signet Libraries, or in that of the British Museum.

Where size is not stated (and is known) the volume is in octavo or under.

<sup>1</sup> B. Oct. 1780; d. Sept. 1853. Second son of Lord Chief-Commissioner Adam (postea). Admiral Sir Charles Adam was engaged in somewhat continuous active service from 1790 until 1845, (Conolly's Fifeshire Biography, pp. 2, 3). This item was issued with separate cover, title, and pagination, but probably also exists as part of a larger volume.

<sup>3</sup> B. June 1784, d. Aug. 1853; fourth son of the Rt. Hon. William Adam, Lord Chief-Commissioner. He held a command at Waterloo, was afterwards High-Commissioner of the Ionian Islands, and subsequently Governor of Madras. This volume is a virulent attack upon his administration of the Ionian Islands.

<sup>4</sup> Younger brother and colleague of Robert Adam (postea); both of them eminent architects. D. Oct. 1794, at that time engaged upon a History of Architecture.

The identity of this author is vouched by the Gentleman's Magazine of 1794, and also by Leslie Stephen's Dict. of National Biog.

<sup>4</sup> B. at Donibristle village, now parish-minister of Channelkirk, near Lauder; formerly in charge of Arbroath Mission Church, and for a time assistant at Galashiels.

<sup>5</sup> This work may be regarded as almost unique. Mr. Allan compiled it in connection with the Annals of Channelkirk (which he is about to publish), and had an edition of only two copies printed, giving one of these to the Presbytery, and retaining the other for his own use.

<sup>2</sup> Attributed to him (no doubt correctly) by Henderson (Annals, p. 618), and in Mackelvie's Annals, p. 176. A poem, under the same title (but bearing no other resemblance to it) had been anonymously published by David Mallet, (Birmingham, 1760, a new edition appearing of London 1849). These, together with the Dunfermline print of 1814, are all three indexed under the name of David Mallet or Malloch in the Catalogue of the Advocates' Library, which is of course an error. There were other editions of Mallet's Poem, London, 1776 and 1810.

<sup>3</sup> A very distinguished covenanting preacher, son of John Blackadder of Blackhall, and representative of the ancient family of Blackadder of Tulliallan. In his day that patrimony had dwindled to the estate of Blair, and although Mr Blackadder succeeded to the baronetcy, neither he nor any of his descendants claimed or used the title. According to the above biography, he was born in 1615, but Scott's Fasti states that upon the authority of his tombstone, as also from the year of his graduation, this date ought evidently to be 1623. Ordained June 1653 to the parish of Troqueer, whence he was ejected in Oct. 1662, being outlawed in 1674, and in 1681 imprisoned upon the Bass Rock, where he died in Dec. 1685, before effect could be given to an order which had been issued for his release. He was a great-grandson of the Rev. Robert Pont, postea.

The family of Blacater or Blackadder, of Tulliallan, was an offshoot from the famous one of that name in Berwickshire, and it would appear that the estate was acquired through the marriage of a Blackadder with Elizabeth Edmonstoune, the heiress of Tulliallan, who became mother of Sir Patrick Blackadder, and of Robert Blackadder, first archbishop of Glasgow (Culross and Tulliallan, vol. ii., p. 320). It was Archbishop Blackadder who erected in 1503 St. Mungo's Chapel at Culross, of which scanty ruins still remain (ibid., vol. i., p. 91), while it is probable that a still older chapel marked the same site, the traditionary birthplace of St. Mungo or Kentigern.

<sup>1</sup> B. at (or perhaps more correctly, "in the neighbourhood of") Dunfermline, 1539; son of William Blackwood and Helen Reid. He was educated at Paris and Toulouse, afterwards settling at Poitiers, where he married and spent the rest of his life. It is evident that he there occupied an official position, apparently that of a "Counsellor or Judge of the Parliament of Poitiers," (Dict. of National Biog.; see also Blackwood's epitaph in Opera Omnia). He d. at Poitiers 1613, and was buried in the Church of St. Porcharius, where a marble monument was erected to his memory. One of Dunfermline's earliest authors, and especially noted as a staunch champion of Mary, Queen of Scots.

The Marquis of Dufferin and Ava traces his descent to John Blackwood—of the Fifeshire family of that name, and perhaps a cousin of Adam Blackwood—who was born during the reign of Queen Elizabeth, and emigrated to Ireland. The heartiest acknowledgments are due by the compiler to his lordship for the most ready and kindly assistance rendered both upon the subject of pedigree and the collation of the printed works of Adam Blackwood, as also for permission to quote this interesting extract from one of his letters:—

"I am sorry to say I am not entitled to claim a direct descent from so distinguished a bearer of our name, nor have I been able to verify by any authentic record in what relation my ancestor, who emigrated to this country about the same time that Adam Blackwood went to Poitiers, stood towards him. The tradition in the family is that he was a cousin, but this is mere conjecture. That they were of the same house, however, is proved by the fact that my ancestor, who came over here during James the First's reign, bore the same arms as Adam, but with two mullets and a crescent, instead of one mullet and a crescent.

"The last of the French Blackwoods was a certain Mlle. Scholastique de Blackwood, who died in France, an old maid, in 1837; but there are a good many descendants of Adam in the female line still extant in France, and with these I have been in very friendly communication.

"I may at once mention that I have a duodecimo copy of the Sanctarum Precationum Prooemia; and, what is even more interesting, I have the autograph manuscript of these prayers. These “prayers and poems are written on the fly leaves at the beginning

“and at the end of a Livre d'Heures given to Adam Blackwood by “Mary Queen of Scots.

“Many many years ago I went to Dunfermline to see what “records there were of the Blackwood family, but unfortunately there “was a great gap in the archives just at the time we are speaking of.
“There was one notice, however, which has always puzzled me, of a “‘Blackwood of Blaikwode,’ implying that there must have been some “small policy belonging to the family in the 15th or 16th centuries;
“but I have never been able to localize it.”

In the Retours (Inquisitionum ad Capellam Domini Regis retornatarum . . . . . Abbreuiatio), under Inquisitiones Speciales, County of Fife, are registered the successions of John Blackwood (heir to his father, Thomas, Jan. 1623),

James Blaikwode (heir to his father, Adam, Dec. 1624), and all as portioners of Wester Coldrane, Eister Cowdrane, and Eister Collindrane, respectively. In the same archives, under date July 1628, occurs the name of James Hopburne of Cowcainrye (Cockairney) “cum postestate effodiendi glebas in maresia vocata Mos de Coudrane.” Coldrane, Cowdrane and Collindrane are without doubt to be identified with Coldrain of the present day, in the united parish of Fossoway and Tullibole, where, some two miles south-west from the town of Kinross, are no fewer than four places of that name, viz., East, Mid, and West Coldrain, and also Wood of Coldrain; while, a little to the south of them, lies the Cockairney above mentioned. There were formerly several mosses adjoining—one of them “The Moss of Coldrain.” It is highly probable that these Blackwoods were of the same family as Adam Blackwood, our author, and that in Coldrain is to be found the seat of their patrimony. It is a curious coincidence that the surname of the present tenant of West Coldrain is Blackwood.

Fossoway and Tullibole are now in Kinross-shire, but at the period in question it is evident that part at least of Tullibole lay within Fife-shire. The two parishes were united ca. 1614, and it is noteworthy that the county of Kinross contained only three parishes until its enlargement in 1685, (Sibbald's History of Fife, p. 105), when Cleish and Tullibole were annexed to Kinross-shire.

<sup>2</sup> Elder brother of Adam Blackwood. B. at (or near) Dunfermline; went to Paris in 1551, and afterwards taught philosophy in the University there. D. at Paris 1614, leaving other works in MS. It indeed seems doubtful whether the three above-noted (given upon the authority of Dempster's Hist. Eccles., Bann. He had a son, Henry, (a professor of medicine at Paris) who wrote Hippocratis Coi Prognosticonum, Paris, 1625, and other items, but does not come into our list, unless indirectly.

George Blackwood, "Dumfermilini natus, Henrici et Adami affinis" (ibid. vol. i., p. 117) was in Roman orders and resident at Paris in 1571. No printed works of his are known, although he also is said to have left MSS.,—Compendium Logicae, and Compendium Physicae.

<sup>2</sup> Son of Rev. Thomas Blair, minister of the Anti-Burgher Church at Cairneyhill 1791 to 1813, who latterly kept a school near Ardrossan until his death in Sept. 1820.

The Rev. James Blair was born at Cairneyhill in Sept. 1797, and early in life joined the Baptist Church, in which he afterwards became an outstanding preacher and evangelist. For several years he was engaged as a teacher in Ardrossan, Arran, Kilwinning, and Saltcoats, successively. At Saltcoats he was ordained to the ministry in March 1829, and remained there as pastor until his removal in the same capacity to Ayr (ca. 1837-1840) and subsequently to Dunfermline (ca. 1840-1844) whence he was appointed in Oct. 1844 as an itinerating evangelist throughout Scotland. From 1848 to 1851 he was settled at Stirling, and for the next four years at Dundee, whence he retired to Bridle of Allan in 1855.

D. at Aberdeen, April 1859. (See his Life and Labours, and also Dunfermline Monthly Advertiser).

The first item under this author's name is quoted from his Biography, where it is also stated that he published two or three small tracts at Dundee.

A daughter of the Rev. James Blair was married to John L. Miller, printer in Dunfermline—the junior partner in John Miller & Son.

<sup>2</sup> Of John Blair not much is known. He is understood to have been a native of Fifeshire, and with more certainty, to have received his education at Dundee as a schoolfellow of Wallace, to whom he afterwards became chaplain. He was a Benedictine monk of Dunfermline, adopting "in religion" the name of Arnold, and is said to have also written "De Liberata Tyrannide Scotia," of which, however, no trace seems now to remain. The "Relationes" themselves were first printed in Sir Robert Sibbald's "De Gestis . . . . Gulielmi Vallæ, Scotiæ olim custodis, Collectanea varia," Edin. 1705. The objection has been made that these Relationes run too much upon the lines of Fordun's Scotichronicon, but, beyond a doubt, such a work by Blair did exist; and it seems fully more reasonable to suppose that Fordun should have followed Blair (if the writings of the latter were accessible) than that an unknown later author of the Relationes simply copied Fordun. And this the more especially, since "Blind Harry" expressly acknowledges his "Life and Acts of Sir William Wallace" (in Scots metre) to have been founded on a Latin version by Blair.

Blind Harry's work was written during the reign of James IV., and has been frequently printed,—e.g., Edin. 1570, 1620, 1661; Glasgow, 1722; Dundee, 1770; Crieff, 1774; &c., &c.

<sup>3</sup> Evidently a native of Dunfermline; born ca. 1800, d. ca. 1880,—and, at least latterly, resident at Golfdrum. "The Highland Maid" bears to have been written about the year 1820.

<sup>4</sup> B. (upon the outskirts of our district) at Cluny, near Lochgelly, Jan. 1830; educated at Auchterderran parish-school and St. Andrews Univ. Ordained to Dunblane U.P. Church, April 1856; Moderator of the U.P. Synod, 1898; resigned the active ministry in 1900. Mackelvie's Annals and Statistics of the United Presbyterian Church, which he edited, have been of the greatest service in connection with the numerous ministers of that denomination to whom reference is made.

<sup>1</sup> Eldest daughter of James VI.; born at Dunfermline Aug. 1596; married, Feb. 1613, to Frederick V., Elector Palatine of the Rhine, and, for a brief period, King of Bohemia. She d. Feb. 1662. Her birth-place has been the subject of much controversy, which, however, seems to be finally decided upon the evidence of the contemporary diarists, Moysie and Birrell. Miss Benger quotes the date of Princess Elizabeth's birth as 1606, while the authoress of "A Sketcher's Notes" is also far astray in giving the year 1569.

<sup>2</sup> This is the second volume of two, the first of which is "To illustrate a view of the old Church of Dun." The authoress is said to have been a Miss Webster, daughter of a minister of the Church of Scotland.

(His brother, Dr. James Murdoch Brown, seems not to have published anything separately).

<sup>2</sup> Son of the Rev. James Brown, parish-minister of Newbattle. Ordained to the second charge of Dunfermline Abbey, May 1837; removed in May 1844 to Rodney Street Presbyterian Church, Liverpool; and thence in Dec. 1846 to the Caledonian Church, London. This latter charge he resigned in 1849, and was soon afterwards ordained deacon in the Church of England by the Bishop of London. Mr Brown officiated for some time at Uxbridge and elsewhere, and upon receiving full orders, in June 1851, was appointed to the curacy of Chenfield, Essex. From 1852 to 1854 he had a proprietary chapel in London (Eaton Chapel) and to financial difficulties ensuing upon this step may be attributed the after troubles which are described in his "Moral Murder" (really an autobiography) noted below.

Although the connection of the Rev. John Tod Brown with Dunfermline was comparatively brief, his name is here separately entered, since the literature associated therewith is largely local. In addition to the items noted above, as written by (or in reply to) him, he was the author of—"Sermon on the Death of Sir Robert Peel," 1850:—"Moral

<sup>2</sup> Minister of the Secession Church, Tillicoultry, 1818-1825; he evidently had some connection with Dunfermline, and indeed in 1830 declined a call from Queen Anne Street Church. He withdrew from the Secession Church in 1841, and d. Feb. 1858 in his seventy-third year (Mackelvie's Annals). These three pamphlets are catalogued in this position, having a Dunfermline connection scarcely otherwise to be classified. Mr. Browning published at least two other items,—“The obstructions to Popular Freedom,” and an “Apology for withdrawing from the United Associate Church,” 1841. It is, however, doubtful whether either of these had, like the above, any association with our locality.

<sup>1</sup> Hereditary lord of Annandale, and Earl of Carrick. B. 1274; crowned at Scone, March 1306, King Robert I. of Scotland. D. at Cardross Castle, June 1329, and was buried near the High Altar of Dunfermline Abbey. This latter fact forms his chief connection with the locality, although Dunfermline was certainly at that period a royal residence; and indeed King Robert the Bruce had a son born there in 1324, who afterwards succeeded to the Scottish Crown as David II. Although the name of the Bruce is intimately associated with our town, no works are here included except those which bear reference either to his burial in 1329, or to the re-interment of his remains in 1819.

<sup>2</sup> The place of printing is not stated, but this pamphlet was advertised in The Panoply as published at the Pitsligo Press.

<sup>3</sup> This work was commenced in 1855, although some years may have elapsed before it was actually put to press. Part IV. was most probably not actually printed at Burntisland (1883), as the Rev. G. H. Forbes died in 1875, and a year or two later the Pitsligo Press (under Rev. Canon Walter Bell) was removed to Edinburgh.

Library, are fifteen long columns of entries, largely consisting of Speeches, Letters, Declarations and Proclamations. Apart from these, the Sermons alone (published during many years) upon the "Martyrdom," would of themselves make a goodly array. It has been considered fittest to arrange the items thus:—

I. King Charles' collected works, and the Eikon Basilike, (which is now generally, if not incontestably, admitted to be of his own authorship) with the important writings tributary to the Eikon.

II. Personal Narratives of the Life and Death of King Charles.

As a line had to be drawn somewhere, the treatment of class II. has necessarily been rather arbitrary. Official "Speeches," "Declarations," and "Messages," are not included.

The compiler presents his sympathies (in advance) to the future bibliographer of the town of Linlithgow, who will have perhaps an even more difficult task to discriminate what and what not to include concerning Mary Queen of Scots, who was born in Linlithgow Palace.

<sup>1</sup> Includes (in addition to the Prayers) "His Majesties Declaration concerning the Treaty": &c., paged continuously between the Eikon and the Prayers. Has also an old autograph "R. Erskine";—? of our Ralph Erskine.

Dr. Perinchief in his "Life and Death of Charles the First" enumerates 55 editions of the Eikon up to 1686.

<sup>1</sup> B. at Dunfermline, ca. 1845, son of James Collier; studied at St. Andrews University for the Congregational Church, but resigned his connection. Afterwards was engaged by Mr. Herbert Spencer to assist him in his literary labours. Collier's name distinctly appears in Descriptive Sociology as compiler of Part I., and translator of Part VIII. He was in New Zealand, in poor health, in 1895.

<sup>2</sup> Elizabeth Melvill, daughter of Sir James Melvill of Halhill; married to John Colvil, laird of Comrie and Kincardine; mother of Alexander Colvil, and perhaps also of Samuel Colvil, the two authors next to be mentioned. Her husband was the eldest son and heir of Alexander Colvil (or Colville), last Commendator of Culross, whence the honorary title usually given to her of "Lady Culross." In a volume of Poems by Alexander Hume, Edin. 1599, she is styled "Elizabeth Mal-vill, Ladie Cumrie." Notwithstanding its numerous editions, "Ane Godlie Dreame" is exceedingly scarce in separate form, the present compiler having indeed never been able to secure a copy of any impression.

<sup>1</sup> According to the British Museum Catalogue, the "Godly Dream" has also been lithographed in running-hand by J. Thomson, Glasgow, 1889.

<sup>3</sup> Apparently a younger brother of the immediately preceding. In the Dedication of The Grand Impostor Discovered the author signs himself Samuel Colvill; in the Preface and Licence to print he appears as Samuel Colvil; while upon the title-page he is merely S. C. The last is the signature to the Whiggs Supplication or Scotch Hudibras, and according to some doggerel verse in the Preface, the author's Christian name was Samuel, and he was born at Culross. Notwithstanding the discrepancies in date and name, the authorship of the Scotch Hudibras is attributed in the Dict. of National Biog. to the Rev. Alexander Colvil, D.D.—a proposition which seems to be untenable. Dr. Colvil died in 1676, and the earliest edition of the Whiggs Supplication (so far as ascertained) is of 1681; internal evidence is also distinctly non-suggestive of a learned ecclesiastic as its author.

<sup>1</sup> Two engravings in one copy, and three in another; the latter including an extra title-page with vignette headed "Morison's Edition of the Scots Hudibrass, by S. Colville," and, at foot, "Perth: Printed for R. Morison & Son, Jany. 2, 1797." Both editions are otherwise identical, and upon the real title-page bear, "St. Andrews: Printed by and for James Morison, printer to the University, 1796."

About ten years ago, too many "original" MS. copies of the Mock Poem were offered for sale. One of these, (Part I.), in the writer's possession, certainly bears every appearance of being in a contemporary hand, and it is possible that the little volume was so popular that manuscript copies were made after the first edition became exhausted. S. C., who wrote The Life of Lady Halket, 1701, (postea), is not improbably to be identified with this Samuel Colvil.

<sup>2</sup> Second son of Robert Colvill of Cleish. B. ca. 1542; d. at Paris, Nov. 1605. "Parson of Kilbryde," 1567-1584, and Chantor of Glasgow Cathedral. He married in 1572, and was in Holland 1597, settling at Paris, Jan. 1600, where he rejoined the Roman Church,—hence his Parzenese. Dr. Laing had in his possession a deed executed by Colvill and his wife, Janet Russell, in connection with the Salt-pans of Culross, 1578. The first item is a vindication of the Raid of Ruthven, in which Colvill was concerned. Dr. Laing attributes this to our author in his Memoir, p. xvi.

<sup>3</sup> According to the British Museum Catalogue, "called also Wedderburn." Evidently "of Ochiltree and Crombie," and father of Miss Margaret Agnes Colville, who next follows, but whose works are indexed under her married name,—Mrs. Kegan Paul. The Rev. Robert Wedderburn of Jamaica was his brother.

<sup>4</sup> Son of John Couper, manufacturer in Dunfermline. Ordained (assistant and successor) to the parish of Burntisland, May 1834; joined the Free Church at the Disruption in 1843, (Scott's Fasti). The last-noted sermon was reprinted at Burntisland by David Wood about ten years later.

<sup>1</sup> Noted from the British Museum Catalogue, although the identity of the author does not seem to be fully assured.

<sup>2</sup> B. March 1800, d. March 1891. A staunch vegetarian, and founder, in 1830, of the Dunfermline Association for Total Abstinence—the first of its kind in Scotland.

<sup>3</sup> Great-grandson of the Rev. Ralph Erskine, through whose first marriage, with Margaret Dewar of Lassodie, he succeeded to that estate. He was b. 1771 (son of Rev. John Fraser, Associate Church, Auchtermuchty, who had married Magdalene Erskine), and in compliance with the deed of entail, upon his succession to Lassodie assumed the name of Dewar. This was about the year 1796, when he had from February to November been minister of Saltcoats Associate Church. After his resignation of the pastoral office he studied medicine, becoming a surgeon in the Army, and later, a lecturer on medicine in Edinburgh. D. Jan. 1823. <sup>1</sup> This work does not bear the translator's name, for which Mackelvie's Annals, as above, is taken as our authority. Dr. Dewar wrote several other pamphlets upon medical subjects, amongst which are probably "Observations on Vaccine Inoculation," London, 1805; and "On Epilepsy and the use of the Viscus Quercinus, or Mistletoe of the Oak," London, 1806: both of them indexed in the British Museum Catalogue under Henry Fraser.

<sup>4</sup> B. at Kincardine-on-Forth, September 1842; a famous chemist. Although his contributions to scientific journals are very numerous, it has not been ascertained that he has written any entirely separate item. According to Joseph Irving's The Book of Scotsmen, Eminent &c., Professor Dewar is the author of several works on Organic and Physical Chemistry, and has published, in conjunction with Professor M'Kendrick of Glasgow, "The Physiological Action of Light," but the present writer has been unable to verify this statement. Professor Dewar's most famous achievement is, perhaps, the liquefaction of gases.

<sup>5</sup> No doubt by the same author, although the local connection is not positively stated, as in the case of the preceding item. Mr. Douglas was parochial schoolmaster at Abbotshall, Kirkcaldy, in 1824, as appears from a circular-letter issued by him as secretary to a Schoolmasters' Association in that year, (British Museum Catalogue). "Brief Considerations on the Income Tax and Tariff Reform, &c.," were published by an author of the same surname and initials at Birmingham in 1842, but the identification seems doubtful, (Ibid.)

<sup>3</sup> B. Jan. 1748; succeeded to the earldom in 1778, and four years later took up residence at Culross Abbey, but had to part with that estate ca. 1798. D. in poverty at Paris, July 1831. He patented at least two inventions, one for the application of tar to ships' bottoms, and the other for spinning machinery.

DUNFERMLINE PRINTING, (WHEN NOT ELSEWHERE CATALOGUED UNDER SPECIAL HEADINGS).

[Note.—This is not presented as a general list of Dunfermline printing, but merely to supplement the very numerous items, (occurring upon almost every page of our main catalogue), inserted in the ordinary course, and in every case (when from a local press which could be identified) with the printer's name appended. No book or pamphlet is indexed more than once in the whole catalogue; preference, as to its position, being first given to local authorship, secondly to subject (if of distinct connection with the district,—e.g., Aberdour, Auchtertool, Ballingry, Dunfermline—under its various headings, &c., &c.), and only in the last resort is any item placed in this category of local printing, and then because it does not appear to come distinctly under any other more specific heading. Such an entry as Serjeant Cockburn's "Poem" of 1800 (the first which here occurs) might have found another place somewhere under

DUNFERMLINE PRINTING.

Dunfermline, but we have no section for Dunfermline,—Topographical (this would have involved far too many cross entries), and the work does not seem to fall naturally into any of our actual divisions, while as to the point of authorship, the Serjeant was evidently but a temporary resident].

DUNFERMLINE,—PRINTED BY D. RICHARDSON.

- <sup>1</sup> The Ruins of the Royal Palace and Abbey of Dunfermline, a Poem, by Serjeant Cockburn, R.N.B.F. 16 pp. Printed and Sold by D. Richardson, 1800.

<sup>1</sup> An extremely rare pamphlet, of which only two copies are known to the present writer. No earlier specimen of Dunfermline Printing is known to survive, although GAVIN BRUGO is said to have had a bookshop and small printing-press as early as 1762 (Henderson's Annals), and Mr. CRERAR to have commenced printing in 1783 (Ibid., also Chalmers' History). For both of these, see the notice of DUNFERMLINE PRINTERS (immediately following our Preface), where is given a chronological list—so far as known—of our local presses, no fewer than nine of which do not appear under the present heading, since their work (again with the very special reservation—so far as known to us) comes into this main Catalogue under either individual authors or under such headings as DUNFERMLINE,—TRADES, SOCIETIES, NEWSPAPERS, &c.

<sup>2</sup> According to Henderson's Annals, p. 634, the Precursor was printed by William Liddell. Probably this is correct as regards No. I., of which no copy is now available. No. II., however, was certainly printed in Edinburgh, as it explicitly calls attention to this fact, due to the refusal of the two Dunfermline printers (doubtless Liddell and Miller). No. III. merely bears the imprint "Published and sold by Thomas Morrison, senior."

<sup>3</sup> Our sole information as to this paper is derived from Henderson's Annals, pp. 635-636. No. I. was published 1 May 1834, and No. III. on 5 July of the same year. How long it continued is not known.

<sup>4</sup> This issue, in small folio, and the next, in large quarto, both consisted of advertisements only, and were nominally gratis. Nevertheless they bear the following notice, "Those who have not Subscribed for "the Year, are requested to keep the Paper Clean, as it may be "called for," on Nos. 26-37, while from No. 39, of Feb. 1839, it appears that the annual subscription was Threepence, although the paper is still described as gratis."

<sup>1</sup> In 1853, four newspapers were regularly published in Dunfermline. The following "Notice" appears in "The Dunfermline Journal," 28 Oct. of that year:—"The Proprietors of the Dunfermline Newspapers have agreed to Publish as follows in future:—The Chronicle on the first, the Advertiser on the second, and the Journal on the fourth or last Friday of each month. The third Friday has been offered to the News. By this arrangement Dunfermline will have a Paper weekly for One Penny, with the exception of four weeks in the year; and the public will be able to ascertain, without any trouble, what Paper will be published every week."

<sup>3</sup> Apparently not printed in Dunfermline. This is noted on account of the imprints "Issued as a supplement to the 'Telegraph' of 5th Feb. 1859" and "Published by D. Campbell, 'Telegraph' Office, Dunfermline," upon a pamphlet catalogued under "DUNFERMLINE,—PRINTED FOR."

<sup>4</sup> The first editor for a year, 1859-1860, was David Pae,—the novelist,—succeeded by Thomas N. Brown, 1860-1866; since 1866 this newspaper has been edited by its proprietor, Archibald Romanes,—who it may be noted took part in the publication of the first number, of 21 April 1859. The double title, from 1859 to 1864, was of course due to the bi-weekly and tri-weekly issue.

DUNFERMLINE,—NEWSPAPERS.

Note.—The “Bridge of Allan Journal, and Spa Reporter,” a fortnightly four-page large folio newspaper, was printed by W. Clark, Dunfermline, in 1853. No. 1 was of 11 May, No. 10 of 14 Sept. William Clark & Son also printed “The War Gazette and official organ of the Hallelujah Army”,—a halfpenny weekly of eight quarto pages,—No. 1, 18 Nov. 1882; No. 90, 2 Aug. 1884. This was succeeded by “The Banner and official organ of the Hallelujah Army,” a four-page folio; No. 1 appearing 9 Aug. 1884. Both of these journals were published by “General Gault at 369 High Street, Edinburgh,” and the impression varied from 3000 to 600 copies.

<sup>2</sup> St. John's Gospel was also issued in 1843 (74 pp.) by the same translator and from the same press, (British Museum Catalogue). It would be interesting to be able to trace the Dunfermline connection.

<sup>1</sup> B. Nov. 1776, third son of the famous General Sir Ralph Abercromby. Speaker of the House of Commons, 1835-1839, and upon his retirement created Baron Dunfermline. He d. April 1858, having spent his latter years at Colinton. He seems indeed to have had no connection with Dunfermline except by his peerage. The British Museum Catalogue notes also two political skits in connection with Abercromby and the Edinburgh Election of 1832.

<sup>2</sup> B. ca. 1555, son of George, seventh Lord Seton. He had the charge of Prince Charles (afterwards Charles I.) for three years; became Lord Chancellor and was created first Earl of Dunfermline in 1605. D. at Pinkie House, June 1622, and was buried in Dalgety Church. The title was forfeited in 1690, the fourth and last Earl dying Dec. 1694.

Another of the same name and period, (Rev. John Durie, b. at Mauchline 1537, d. Feb. 1600), was also connected with Dunfermline, commencing his career as a monk there under the patronage of his cousin, George Durie of Craighluscar, who was the last clerical Abbot of Dunfermline, 1539-1561 or even later, and who was canonized by the Church of Rome two years after his death, (Chalmers' History vol. i., pp. 94, 199, 307-308; vol. ii., pp. 156, 309). One of the Abbot's official acts was the bringing to trial of this cousin, about the year 1558, for "heresy," with the result that he was found guilty and condemned to suffer death by being built up between two walls, although, through the Earl of Arran, he received his liberty, (Ibid., vol. i., p. 199; Henderson's Annals, p. 197).

This monk embraced the Protestant faith and became an eminent preacher. He was successively minister at Hailes (now Colinton), Leith, Edinburgh (ca. 1573), and Montrose. His daughter, Elizabeth, married James Melville, the diarist. No printed works by this Rev. John Durie are known, but in the next generation there was another of the same name (perhaps a descendant of the above) who, between 1638 and 1656, published at least nine items.

Dury or Durie is a very old Dunfermline family, being, it is understood, the ancient possessors of the lands of Durie (near Leven in Fife), and of whom Abbot George Durie was a representative.

<sup>3</sup> And eleventh Earl of Kincardine. B. July 1766, Ambassador to Turkey 1799-1803, when he acquired the sculptures (known as the Elgin Marbles) from the Parthenon at Athens, shipped to London 1806-1812. These were purchased from him for the British Museum for £30,000. He died at Paris, Nov. 1841.

<sup>1</sup> Of Carnock,—the “Black Colonel,” who resided at Culross, and was noted for his litigious propensities. B. at Cardross, March 1662, third son of David, second Lord Cardross. D. at Edinburgh, Jan. 1743. In 1700 he purchased the greater portion of the estates of the Earl of Kincardine, including Carnock, Inzievar, and Tulliallan, and was thereafter designated as of Carnock.

<sup>2</sup> Of Carnock, son of the above, b. at Stirling Castle 1695, d. March 1768. In 1737 he became Professor of Scots Law in Edinburgh University. His works are still held in great repute. John Buchanan, LL.D., wrote a pamphlet upon Erskine, (probably ca. 1875) but the exact title is unknown to the present writer.

<sup>3</sup> Eldest son of the preceding, and grandson of the “Black Colonel.” B. at Edinburgh, June 1721; ordained parish-minister of Kirkintilloch, May 1744. In 1753 he was translated to Culross; in 1758 to New Greyfriars, Edinburgh; and in 1767 promoted to the collegiate charge of Old Greyfriars. D. at Edinburgh, Jan. 1803. A voluminous writer, and a very eminent man. He preached his first sermon at Torryburn.

<sup>1</sup> B. at Monilaws, Northumberland, March 1685. During the latter years of his studentship was tutor and chaplain in the house of his kinsman, Colonel John Erskine of Carnock (the "Black Colonel") at Culross. Licensed probationer, June 1709, and ordained colleague and successor at Dunfermline, August 1711; promoted to the first charge, May 1716. He gave in his secession (to the Associate Presbytery, of which he was one of the founders) Feb. 1737, and was deposed May 1740. D. Nov. 1752. As to the authorship of the anonymous Congratulatory Poem, see Fraser's Life, p. 155. He preached his first sermon at Culross, 14 June 1709, (Ibid., p. 40).

- <sup>1</sup> ERSKINE, Rev. Ralph. Gospel-Sonnets: or, Spiritual Songs, &c. The eighth edition. With "Smoking Spiritualized" before the Sonnets. 336 pp. Edin. 1755.
- . ———. The eighteenth edition. "Smoking Spiritualized" before the Sonnets. 342 pp. Edin. 1782.
- . ———. The twenty-fourth edition, with Portrait. To which is prefixed, some account of the Author's life and writings,—"Meditation on Smoking" at end. 321 pp. London, (1793).
- . ———. The twenty-fifth edition. (With the same arrangement). 371 pp. Edin. n.d.
- . ———. 334 pp. Edin. 1803.
- (This edition is not numbered).
- <sup>2</sup> ———. The Harmony of the Divine Attributes display'd, &c. A Sermon preached at Dumfermling, &c. 78 pp. Edin. 1724.

- Sold by Mrs. Meldrum in Dunfermline.
- . The Best Bond, or, Surest Engagement: A Sermon, &c. n.p. 1724.
- . Another edition. 78 pp. Edin. 1729.
- (Only slightly differing from the first edition of 1724).

<sup>3</sup> From the same press (as was also the second item on p. 123, antea), at which the first edition of Burns' Poems was printed.

<sup>1</sup> Son of the Rev. Ralph Erskine. B. (no doubt at Dunfermline) Sept. 1735; became a civil-engineer, and was in business in London up to the year 1771, when he emigrated to the United States. He there received the appointment of Geographer and Surveyor-General to the U.S. Army, and died in America, Oct. 1780. There are copies of two editions of this work in the British Museum.

<sup>1</sup> Of Nether-Kinneddar, near Saline ; son of Rev. William Erskine, Episcopalian clergyman at Muthill ; b. 1769, d. Aug. 1822. A Judge in the Court of Session, and an intimate friend of Sir Walter Scott, Bart. (whose name is also associated with English Minstrelsy). The Third Canto of Marmion (first published in 1808) is dedicated to William Erskine, and indeed is understood to have been composed in the house of Nether Kinneddar, where, in the drawing-room (1894), were (and probably still are) portraits of both Scott and Erskine. Lord Kinneddar is said to have written the preface to Scott's The Bridal of Triermain, Edin. 1813. The 1855 edition of Marmion contains a plate of Dunfermline Abbey.

<sup>4</sup> Born at Burntisland, his father being for some time Provost of that town. Editor in succession of the Strathearn Herald, Fife Herald, and Edinburgh Courant. Latterly a very successful operatic writer. D. at London, ca. 1892. In addition to the operettas entered upon next page, (as being presumably more or less original in character), Mr. Farnie also adapted a number of others from the French or German, including

Romeo e Giuletta, ... ..	1867
Madame l'Archiduc, ... ..	1876
The Naval Cadets (from R. Genée's Der Seekadet ),	1880
La Fille du Tambour-major, ... ..	1880
Madame Favart, ... ..	1880
Les Mousquetaires, ... ..	1880
The Mascotte, ... ..	1881
Manola, ... ..	1882
Boccaccio, ... ..	1882

Several (perhaps all) were written in collaboration with various composers—as to the musical department—and, without doubt, the above-noted (most of which are in the British Museum Library) form but an incomplete list.

<sup>1</sup> This originally appeared in the Fife Herald of 1847. The celebrated Dr. John Brown of Edinburgh (author of "Rab and his Friends") used it as the basis of his "Marjorie Fleming." In the "Scotsman" correspondence columns of Sept. 1899, was a rather vigorous controversy upon the subject of this story,—the chief disputants being a sister of Mr. Farnie, under the name of "Justitia," and an uncle of Dr. John Brown.

<sup>2</sup> Advertised in "The Fife Coast, &c." (styled also "The Handy-Book of the Fife Coast") in 1860, together with "The City of St. Rule," and (shortly to be published) "The Handy-Book of the Tay,"—all three as by Henry Farnie. The second edition of "St. Andrews," and the tenth thousand of "Pet Marjorie," as also "The Golfer's Manual," are likewise advertised upon the cover of the "Fife Pulpit," published by John C. Orr, Cupar-Fife, 1866, and are there expressly stated to be of one authorship. It may be noted that this "Fife Pulpit" of 1866 is entirely distinct from another small volume of 1876 which bears the same title, and which is mentioned, postea, under Professor Neil M'Michael, D.D.

<sup>1</sup> From Cumbernauld. Ordained minister of the Relief Church, North Chapel Street, Dunfermline, Oct. 1790; d. July 1837, aged seventy-three. His first work was not written with a view to separate publication, but was intended as part of a History of the Hebrews, which, however, appears never to have been printed (see Preface to the volume). Mr. Fergus is also stated to have written "several anonymous pamphlets," and to have been the author (more probably "editor") of The Bible Christian's Magazine (Mackelvie's Annals, p. 176).

<sup>1</sup> B. at Dundee, ca. 1523, and said originally to have been a glover. Parish-minister of Dunfermline, from 1560 till his death, 23 Aug. 1598. In 1567 Rosyth was under his charge, which in 1574 comprised Carnock and Beath, Rosyth being then excluded. A daughter, Grizel, was married to Rev. John Row of Carnock in Jan. 1595. In the Catalogue of the Advocates' Library, as also in the Dict. of National Biog., an "Epithalamium Mysticum Solomonis regis," &c., Edin. 1677, is ascribed to the Rev. David Fergusson, but according to Dr. David Laing this was the work of quite another David Fergusson, a native of Kirkcaldy, who lived a hundred years later.

* William Ged, the inventor of stereotype printing, seems to have been born at Dunfermline in or about the year 1690, a member of the old family of Ged of Baldrige. About 1758, his sisters the Misses Ged, two elderly ladies, opened a Day and Boarding School in Dunfermline, but not finding their venture to prosper, soon removed it to the Lawnmarket, Edinburgh, where they were patronised chiefly by Jacobite families, (Chambers' Traditions of Edinburgh, edition of 1825, pp. 48, 49). The estate of Middle Baldrige, "commonly called Mount-hooly," and the Mason-lands adjoining, were in possession of the Ged family for only about ninety years, being acquired in 1634 by Robert Ged "of Geddismylne" (Burntisland), who seems to have died between April and September 1642. The name of his wife was Euphemia Orrok, evidently a sister of Isabella Orrok, who had married the Rev. John Michaelson (or Mitchelson) of Burntisland. The eldest son of Robert Ged and Euphemia Orrok was William Ged, whose wife was Anna Stewart, "daughter of Margaret Napier, Lady Rosyth, and sister of James Stewart of Rosyth." In Dec. 1663, Robert Ged was served heir to his father, William Ged, in the lands of Middle Baldrige and Ged's Mill, &c. (Inquisitiones, Fife, No. 950). Finally, in Nov. 1721, Robert Ged, grandson of the above Robert Ged, sold Middle Baldrige to Henry Welwood, younger of Touch. It is to be noted that, according to a sasine of 16 March 1657, a then Robert Ged of Baldrige and "the corn mill of Kinghorn Wester, alias Geddis-mylnes," had at least four children, John, "Alexander, Euphame, and Beatrix Geds," and was father-in-law to Robert Welwood. Middle Baldrige was thus owned in succession by five (or perhaps six) of the Ged family. It is said that the last Ged of Middle Baldrige nearly ruined himself in unsuccessful search for coal, although his successor in the estate, Henry Welwood, had a very different experience in a similar quest, (Chalmers' History, vol. i., p. 41).

In 1699 Robert Ged, junior of Baldrige, was a Bailie of the Regality of Dunfermline. Before 1583 there was a John Ged, of the Mill of Kinghorn-Wester (Burntisland), and in 1608 a Robert Ged of "Geddis Milne" (Registrum de Dunfermelyn), a place-name to this day preserved at Burntisland.

The Dunfermline connection of William Ged (goldsmith and stereotype printer) seems to be generally admitted, although the links are incomplete as regards absolute proof. Mrs. Ged (said to have been the last of the family) died in June 1821, in her ninety-third year (Henderson's Annals, p. 609). Our William Ged was by trade a goldsmith in Edinburgh, and first attempted stereotyping in 1725. Four years later he entered into a London co-partnership together with William Fenner (stationer), Thomas James (type-founder), and John James (architect), in order to work the new process. In 1731 the company obtained a privilege to print Bibles and Prayer-books for Cambridge University, but owing to divided interests among the partners themselves, and to jealous opposition by their workmen, this project came to utter failure. Two Prayer-books (one of single and one of double column) which had been completed about the year 1732, were both condemned; the copies already printed to be destroyed, and the plates broken up. It seems probable that another Prayer-book (octavo and of larger type), printed partly from Ged's plates and partly from ordinary type, must have shared the same fate. A Bible and a Grammar are also mentioned. Copies of any of the above seem to be entirely unknown, although a "specimen" page of one of the Prayer-books is in the writer's possession. If complete copies exist, they will bear date 1732 or 1733, and will probably have the imprint of John James and Company, or of William Fenner. Upon the abandonment of the London and Cambridge experiment in 1733, Ged returned to Edinburgh, where in June 1736 he issued his "Proposals for Printing by Subscription" a correct edition of Sallust from the new plates. This, as above noted, was printed at Edinburgh in 1739, and again in 1744. William Ged died, October 1749, in poor circumstances, and was buried in Greyfriars' Churchyard.

<sup>2</sup> Professor of Humanity at St. Leonard's College, St. Andrews; parish-minister of Salton, 1670 to 1681; instituted in 1687 to the second charge of Dunfermline. He was deposed by the Synod, June 1701, for "Arminianism and neglect of ministerial duties," but partly for joining the already deposed Rev. Simon Couper in administering the Communion. He was reposed by the General Assembly, and retained office until his death, Jan. 1710, aged about 71; the last Episcopalian parish-minister of Dunfermline, and the immediate predecessor of the Rev. Ralph Erskine in the Abbey second charge.

<sup>3</sup> "By John Hackett, late Commoner of Baliol-College, Oxford." It has not been found possible to prove his pedigree, but the fact of vol. i. being dedicated to the Hon. James Bruce of Broomhall, Fifeshire, seems to point to a local connection on the part of the author, while other indications show that he was related to the Pitfirrane family. Vol. i. (pp. 17 to 20) contains the epitaph (with some detailed biographical notes) of John Hackett, D.D., Bishop of Lichfield and Coventry (b. Sept. 1592, d. Oct. 1670), who was almost certainly a scion of the Hacketts of Pitfirrane, although his works are not entered in this catalogue since he seems to have had no personal connection with the district, but was born in London, the only son of Andrew Hackett "of Pitfirrane" (or more correctly "of the family of Pitfirrane"), senior burgess of Westminster (Walcott's Life of Bishop Hackett, pp. 6 and 147, also Dict. of National Biog.) Even more significant is the occurrence in the same Epitaphs (vol. ii., p. 214) of an inscription "Designed for a Monument in Scotland,"—"To the immortal Memory of Sir Peter Halkett, Baronet, of Pitfirrane," Colonel in the British Army, who was killed in July 1755 in action against the French and Indians near Fort du Quesne, on the River Monongahela, (North America). John Hackett, our author, was apparently son of John Hackett of London (d. June 1755), whose epitaph is also given in vol. i. (p. 122), and who may very possibly have been a descendant of Bishop Hackett, one of whose sons was Sir Andrew Hackett, Knight, of Moxhall in Warwickshire. In any case, the dedication of vol. i. furnishes at least a semi-local connection.

Patrick Halket received from his father, George Halket of Pitfirrane, a charter of the lands of Lumphinnans before 1600, and was the founder of the English family of Halket "of Moxhall," being perhaps the grandfather of Bishop Hackett, (Chalmers' History, vol. i., p. 294).

There is also a volume entitled A Narrative of the Expedition which sailed from England in 1817, to join the South American Patriots, by Lieutenant James Hackett, London, 1818, but the author has not been identified.

<sup>2</sup> Daughter of Thomas Murray (provost of Eton College, and son of Murray of Woodend, of the Tullibardine family); b. at London, Jan. 1622; married, March 1656 (as his second wife), Sir James Halket of Pitfirrane, Knight, who d. Sept. 1670. During the greater part of her twenty-eight years' widowhood, she resided in a house on the south side of the Maygate (Chalmers' History, vol. i., p. 294)—probably the "Abbot's House." She d. April 1699, and left twenty-one volumes in manuscript (all of them of a religious nature), five books in folio, fifteen in quarto, and one in octavo (Ibid., vol. i., p. 296). Of these, at least one in folio, twelve in quarto, and one in smaller size (more of a duodecimo than octavo) are still carefully preserved at Pitfirrane; and possibly some of the remaining seven, required to complete Chalmers' inventory, might also be accounted for;—four in folio and three in quarto.

Lady Halket's father, Thomas Murray, was tutor to Prince Charles (Charles I.), 1605-1621, and at a later period her mother became sub-governess to two of King Charles' children.

The earliest mention of Pitfirrane seems to be in the Registrum de Dunfermelyn, p. 268, where, in April 1360, Margaret, widow of Sir Robert de Meygners (Menzies), Knight, grants to the Monastery of Dunfermline "pro salute anime mee antecessorum et successorum meorum" her whole lands of Pethfurane. In 1399 Philip de Halket, laird of Ballingall and Lumphinnans, received from his cousin, William de Scot de Balwearie, a charter to one-third part of the lands of Pitfirrane (Chalmers' History, vol. i., pp. 189 and 293); and in 1437 is recorded a dispute between David Haket of Lunfennen and the Monastery of Dunfermline as to the boundaries of Pitfirrane (Registrum de Dunfermelyn, p. 285). Reg. Mag. Sig. (14 Oct. 1472) records a grant from James III. to "Willelmo Haket de Petfurane, et heredibus ejus" of the lands of Petconochy. The Reg. Privy Council (9 Feb. 1566) mentions "Adame Halkheid, . . . quha wes slane at the Feild of Flowdoun" (1513) as having been long in "possessioun of the landis of Petlevir and Braidley," evidently under a tack from the Prior and Convent of Dunfermline. It would appear that the family of Halket had owned Ballingall and Lumphinnans for some time before they acquired Pitfirrane. Ballingall seems to have been an estate lying mid-way between Falkland and Strathmiglo.

The first baronet (1662) of Pitfirrane was Sir Charles Halket, stepson of Lady Halket the authoress. Members of the family were frequently provosts of Dunfermline from 1584 to 1760 (Henderson's Annals).

The spelling of the surname has been strictly followed according to its use at the various periods,—Haket, Halkheid, Hacket, Hackett, and Halket, but now Halkett.

<sup>1</sup> Third son of Sir John Halkett of Pitfirrane, Baronet (originally Sir John Wedderburn of Gosford); and brother to both Sir Charles and Admiral Sir Peter Halkett, successive baronets of Pitfirrane. He was b. 1768, and was at one time Governor of the Bahamas and of Tobago. D. at Brighton, Nov. 1852. In the dining-room at Pitfirrane is a portrait of John Halkett, painted apparently about 1840; he also there figures in a large family group as one of fourteen children.

<sup>1</sup> A graduation thesis of 39 pp., at Edinburgh University. It has not been found possible to identify the author, who, however, was at least connected with West Fife. The pamphlet bears three dedicatory leaves: the first addressed "Avunculo suo carissimo, Alexandro Colville, Armigero, de Hillside"; and the second, "Viro spectatissimo Adamo Rolland, Armigero, de Gask." <sup>5</sup> Youngest son of George Henderson (a farm-labourer) and Jean Buchannan, his wife. B. Nov. 1784 at "The Linn," a little West of Dunduff, and some five miles from Dunfermline. When Ebenezer was about three years old, his parents removed to Waulkmill, and thence, three years later (probably in 1790), to Lochend. After less than four years' education (at Dunduff and Dunfermline), he was, at the age of twelve, set to farm-work, afterwards, in 1799-1802, serving an apprenticeship under Thomas Morrison, shoemaker, East Port Street. In 1803, Ebenezer Henderson began to study for the ministry, and in 1805

he and John Paterson (afterwards D.D.) were instructed to proceed to Copenhagen in order to take passage thence for Serampore; but some delay occurring, and a field being open in Scandinavia, it was decided that the two missionaries should there continue the work which circumstances had led them to enter upon.

During the next twenty years Dr. Henderson travelled almost continuously on evangelistic tours through Denmark, Sweden, Iceland, and Russia. In 1825 he returned home, and his sphere of labour was then removed to London, where he became Theological Tutor or Lecturer in Missionary Colleges, first at Hoxton (1826-1830) and afterwards at Highbury (1830-1850), in addition to having much literary work always on hand. In 1852 he was appointed pastor of Sheen Vale Independent Chapel, but resigned the charge next year on account of failing strength. He d. May 1858.

<sup>1</sup> See his Memoir, p. 437. In addition to the numerous volumes written or edited by him, Dr. Henderson also contributed a Preface to a work on India by Rev. William Buyers, missionary at Benares (probably "Letters on India; &c.," pub. London, 1840); although this is doubtless only a single instance of much similar assistance given by him. He revised, for the British and Foreign Bible Society, the proof-sheets of a Turkish Genesis and Psalter, a Turkish New Testament, and an edition of the Danish Bible; as also the Scriptures in Icelandic (Memoir, pp. 450 and 473). Dr. Henderson was also the author of one or more of "The Congregational Lectures," published in 15 vols., 1852-1855.

<sup>2</sup> Advertised in the same newspaper, July 1843; also noted in the British Museum Catalogue as the second edition. The Rev. David Imrie has a copy of this second edition (172 pp., and without any Appendix), with a new title-page dated London, 1863. This appears to have been merely a re-issue of the true second edition (with the title-page alone altered), and to be otherwise identical with the third edition of 1848, save for the absence of the Appendix. Mr. Imrie's copy bears the signature of the author, together with holograph additional notes.

<sup>3</sup> This consists of the second edition—172 pp., with "Finis" and the printer's name (thus purporting to be complete)—and the Appendix following, the latter evidently printed apart, and really an independent afterthought. There really seem to be but two editions,—the first and second, both of 1843,—plus the extra Appendix and Engravings, which, bound together with the second edition of 1843, formed the third edition of 1848. Notwithstanding the four issues (including the irregular second edition of 1863 noted above), this volume seems to be exceedingly scarce. The compiler has seen only single copies of the second edition (1843 and 1863) and of the third (1848), but has never been able to secure a specimen of any.

<sup>4</sup> This is an uncompleted fragment. At least three divisions are in existence, pp. 3-50. In the third, the title was wisely changed to Viagraphia. It originally appeared in the columns of the Dunfermline Journal, commencing 2 Aug. 1858. See advt. of Part I., April 1859.

<sup>1</sup> B. ca. 1430, d. ca. 1506; usually designated schoolmaster of Dunfermline; certainly a resident of that town, if not a native, and apparently in 1478 a Notary-public. In Sept. 1462 "Venerabilis vir Magister Robertus Henrisone, in Artibus Licentiatu et in Decretis Bachalarius," was admitted a member of the then newly instituted University of Glasgow (founded 1451). Selections from Henryson's Poems have been printed by Allan Ramsay in his "Evergreen," 1724; by Lord Hailes in "Ancient Scottish Poems," 1770; and by James Sibbald in the "Chronicle of Scottish Poetry," 1802, (Dr. Laing's Memoir of Henryson prefixed to "The Poems and Fables," &c., 1865, p. xxxv.); also in George Eyre-Todd's "Mediæval Scottish Poetry," Glasgow, 1892. Henryson is generally supposed to have been one of the Hendersons of Fordell; and such may be the fact, although no positive evidence has yet been adduced.

Henryson's works are amongst the very earliest and rarest of Scottish printing. Of "Orpheus the Kyng" only one copy (and that imperfect) is known to exist. No doubt "The Testament of Cresseid" and "The Morall Fabillis" were also issued from the same press. Of "The Testament of Cresseid" there is proof of the existence in 1585 of three copies of some earlier edition; while the "Confirmations of Testaments" of Edinburgh booksellers also show that Henry Charteris held in stock 545 copies in 1599, and Robert Smyth 1638 copies in 1602,—probably of the 1593 edition, of which only a single specimen is now traceable, that in the British Museum. Robert Smyth had also 743 copies of the "Fabilis of Isope," an edition now totally unknown.—(see Dr. Laing's Memoir, as above, pp. 259 and 264).

Sir Francis Kynaston left a manuscript Latin version (dated 1640) both of Chaucer's "Troilus" and Henryson's "Cresseid," from which a specimen was printed by F. G. Waldron in 1796, although the complete work remains unpublished (Ibid., p. 260).

James Bruce's Lives of Eminent Men of Fife, Cupar-Fife, 1846, contains an excellent notice (20 pp.) of Henryson's works. The St. James' Magazine for 1869 also gives a similar article.

<sup>1</sup> Parish-minister of Dalserf, 1691-1697; translated to Carnock, Aug. 1699; d. at Edinburgh, May 1734, in his seventy-sixth year (Scott's Fasti). Mr. Hog was the leader of the "Marrow" Controversy of 1717-1722; his works are noticed at some length in The Theology of Consolation, by Rev. D. C. A. Agnew (Edin. 1881), from which part of our information is derived.

The Rev. James Hog also wrote a preface to Professor Halyburton's Natural Religion insufficient, and Revealed necessary, &c., 1714.

<sup>2</sup> Chaplain of Cambuskenneth Abbey; d. at Culross, 1554. It is by no means certain that these two items are from his pen. The first is ascribed to him (or rather to another Sir James Inglis, Abbot of Culross, who was murdered by John Blackadder of Tulliallan in March 1531) by Mackenzie in his Lives of Scottish Writers; and the second by Hailes and Sibbald, although David Laing includes it in his edition of Dunbar's Poems.

"The Complaynt" has also been attributed to other authors, e.g., James or Robert Wedderburn, and Sir David Lindsay; but the weight of evidence seems to be in favour of the chaplain of Cambuskenneth. Only four copies of the original edition are known to exist, and in all four the title-page is wanting. The "Satyre" may have been the work of the Abbot of Culross, but such cannot have been the case with the "Complaynt," which was not written until about eighteen years after the Abbot's death.

<sup>3</sup> A local manufacturer, son of George Inglis. He joined the Baptists, and was for some time joint-pastor of that body in Dunfermline, together with David Dewar, (Stewart's Reminiscences, second series). D. Nov. 1860, in his eighty-first year.

<sup>1</sup> B. in Dunfermline Palace, July 1394; was murdered at Perth, Feb. 1437. "Christ's Kirk on the Green" is of questionable authorship, but "The Kingis Quair" is accepted as his by most critics, although J. T. T. Brown, in "The Authorship of the Kingis Quair" (1896) argues that it was written fifty years later.

<sup>1</sup> B. in Edinburgh Castle, June 1566. When his mother (Mary, Queen of Scots) was imprisoned in Lochleven Castle, and had been forced to abdicate, he was crowned King of Scotland, July 1567. Upon the death of Queen Elizabeth, March 1603, he became also James I. of England. King James resided frequently at Dunfermline Palace, where were born two of his children, Charles (Charles I.) and Elizabeth, afterwards for a brief period Queen of Bohemia. D. March 1625. Official Declarations, Speeches, &c., are excluded, as in the case of his son, Charles I., who indeed was much more definitely connected with Dunfermline.

It is in virtue of her descent from Princess Elizabeth, "the winter Queen of Bohemia," (daughter of James VI. & I., and born at Dunfermline in 1596) that Her Majesty Queen Victoria sits upon the British throne. The daughter of Elizabeth of Bohemia was Sophia, Electress of Hanover, the mother of George I. who succeeded to the British Crown in 1714.

<sup>1</sup> A rare item, usually occurring only in connection (as in this instance) with Laud's "Prayer Book" of 1637. Notwithstanding the inclusive character of the title, it is understood that King James' own translation ends with Psalm xxxi.

<sup>2</sup> A scarce edition, of which it is understood that only 200 copies were printed, and these specially for the Earl of Winton's chapel at Tranent.

<sup>1</sup> There were also similar collections printed in 1643 and 1658. "Witty Apothegms delivered at various times, &c., by Kings James I. and Charles I.," 1671, would seem to be an amplification of this quaint little volume.

<sup>4</sup> B. at Leith, Sept. 1826; ordained minister of Chalmers Street U.P. Church, Dunfermline, Sept. 1859; resigned this charge 1876, on account of ill-health, and went to Australia, where, Dec. 1877, he was inducted to St. David's Church, Ashfield, near Sydney. Thence he removed to the Scots Church, Sydney, July 1879, of which he was minister until his death, Oct. 1886. His wife (who edited this volume) was Isabella Alexander, second daughter of James Alexander of Balmule, Dunfermline.

<sup>3</sup> "A. Anderson" seems to have been Captain Andrew Anderson, a native of Kincardine, who wrote various items and had them printed elsewhere, notwithstanding the very circumstantial imprint upon his Tracts. This would apparently be about the year 1850. A brother of Captain Anderson was Professor Adam Anderson, LL.D. (also born at Kincardine), who in 1809 became Rector of Perth Academy, and in 1833 Professor of Natural Philosophy at St. Andrews University. He d. Nov. 1846, but although a scientific man of note, does not seem to have ever published anything separately (Conolly's Fifeana).

<sup>4</sup> Mr. Welch published this sermon at the request of his Kirk-Session, on account of charges made against its orthodoxy by Mr. Laurie, Free Church minister of Tulliallan. In 1871 he also printed an "Exposition" upon "Christ's object in Preaching to the Spirits in Prison" (Edin., 16 pp.), but this latter does not appear to have been delivered as a discourse. It was re-issued in the same year in a second edition of 28 pp. See also a brief notice of Mr. Welch in Appendix C.

<sup>2</sup> Son of Rev. John Lindsay, minister of Carnock; born either at Carnock, or (according to Fraser's Life of Ralph Erskine, p. 421) in the parish of Dunfermline. Licensed by the Presbytery of Dunfermline, Aug. 1719, and ordained Jan. 1722, parish-minister of Bothkennar. Translated to Perth (Old Church), Oct. 1741; d. May 1745. (Scott's Fasti gives his parentage as above, but the name of the Rev. John Lindsay does not occur as minister of Carnock).

A certificate, granted in his favour by the Presbytery of Dunfermline, March 1736, states "He was born, and lived most part of his "time within the bounds of this presbytery, and by this presbytery "was licensed to preach the Gospel," &c. (Steven's The History of the Scottish Church, Rotterdam, p. 163). In the British Museum Catalogue is entered tentatively under Mr. Lindsay's name "An Essay upon I. <sup>3</sup> Born "near Edinburgh" in 1750 or 1751; son of a collier, who, after being "lamed" in a coal-pit, took, like our author, to hawking "godly books," dying in 1788, in his ninety-third year

For some years David Love lived near Falkirk, and then served for a short period (ca. 1776-1780) in the Duke of Buccleuch's Regiment of South Fencibles. After this, he (accompanied by his three successive wives) led a most nomadic life, wandering over the length and breadth of England as a hawker of broadsides and chap-books, very many of them of his own composition. Indeed, from incidental mention made in the fifth edition of his "Life, Adventures, and Experience" (192 pp., Nottingham, 1825), it appears that he carried only a small stock, and was in the custom of frequently reprinting at the various towns which he visited, including Falkirk, Berwick, Newcastle, Hull, Leeds, Nottingham, Northampton, Bristol, Gosport, and London, all of which places are specially noted in this regard, while Leicester ought perhaps to be added. His connection with Culross was evidently brief, probably only from about 1781 to 1783; it may have been the original home of his first wife, Mary Thompson. In any case, the fact of a hawker having issued a chap-book from "Culross, 17782," is interesting in more respects than one.

David Love seems finally to have settled at Nottingham, where he was living in 1824. Appended are the titles of four of his productions, quoted from the catalogue of the British Museum Library. The presumptive dates of two are corrected in accordance with the internal evidence afforded by his "Life."

<sup>1</sup> B. June 1748, in the "Queen's House," The Pends, Dunfermline. His parents were John Mackie, carpet manufacturer, and Janet Donaldson, sister to Andrew Donaldson (see antea). At an early age he was placed under John Stedman, M.D., whom he accompanied to Edinburgh in 1764, when the latter removed to the capital. In 1766 he made a voyage to Greenland, and the following year took up a medical practice at Biggleswade. Thence, in 1774, he went to Huntingdon, and remained there for fifteen years, resigning at the end of 1789 in favour of his brothers. In 1792 he resumed practice at Southampton, and finally retired in 1814. Latterly he settled at Chichester, where he d. Jan. 1831. According to Conolly's Fifeshire Biography, p. 313, Dr. Mackie also published several medical treatises, including one upon Tetanus.

<sup>2</sup> B. in Gibb Street, 1848; through his mother, related to two of our local poets,—Robert Gilfillan and Henry Syme, who were respectively her second cousin and brother. Mr. Mackie has all his life been engaged in newspaper work, first upon the Dunfermline Press, and afterwards for a time upon the Dundee Advertiser and other Scottish journals. He was for six years chief sub-editor of the Glasgow Herald, and for nine years conducted (with his brothers) the Daily Review. Then for three years he was leader-writer of the Newcastle Daily Leader, and is now (since 1890) editor of the North-Eastern Daily Gazette of Middlesbrough.

<sup>3</sup> From Kilmarnock. B. Nov. 1806; ordained assistant and successor to Rev. Henry Fergus, of the Relief (now Gillespie U.P.) Church, Dunfermline, Aug. 1835. Professor of Systematic Theology and Church History, in the Relief Church, 1841; and in 1847 Professor of Ecclesiastical History in the U.P. Church. D. April 1874, in his sixty-eighth year. His son, Neil D. M'Michael, is a solicitor in Kilmarnock.

Dunfermline with Malcolm Canmore (III. of Scotland), who at Easter 1070 married the Princess Margaret. She had a great influence with her husband, and did much to civilise Scotland—then in a semi-barbarous state—besides building Dunfermline Abbey, and re-founding Iona. She d. (three days after Malcolm III.) in Edinburgh Castle, 16 Nov. 1093, and was buried in Dunfermline Abbey before the Altar of the Holy Cross. She was canonized by Pope Innocent IV. in 1251, and about the same date her remains were, by order of Alexander III., removed "in choro supra majus altare," in which position (immediately outside and to the east of the present church) is still to be seen her tomb, an immense slab of blue limestone.

It is said that St. Margaret's Life was also published in French, 1629; and in Spanish, 1617; but of these the first-mentioned seems certainly to be apocryphal,—or rather to refer to Queen Margaret of Valois.

D. Feb. 1900. It is understood that he has written at least two other pamphlets in addition to the three which are here catalogued.

<sup>2</sup> Son of the late James Mungall of Transy. It may be noted as a coincidence of surname that Fordun's Scoti-chronicon mentions a Richard Mongal as Prior of Dunfermline in 1148. This Ecclesiastic is said to have written The Lives of St. Bernard and Abelard, and Dr. Ebenezer Henderson accordingly claims him as Dunfermline's earliest known author (Chalmers' History, vol. i., p. 501, and Henderson's Annals, p.
50). It must, however, seem most doubtful whether these Lives ever appeared in print in any form. The reference made by Dr. Peter Chalmers is to Fordun's Scoti-chronicon, vol. i., p. 441 (of Walter Goodall's edition, 2 vols., folio, Edin. 1759), where Richard Mongal is described as "prior claustralis de Dumfermlyn,"—probably a sub-prior.

<sup>4</sup> A kinsman of the family of Murray of Perdew at Dunfermline

1603-1608; of Dunfermline (second charge) in 1614, and there promoted to the first charge, ca. 1620. Deprived, Jan. 1622, for non-conformance

<sup>1</sup> Son of Charles Nisbet, Bar-officer and keeper of the County Buildings at Dunfermline. Our author was a teacher in the Free Abbey Academy, ca. 1862. According to the British Museum Library Catalogue, Mr. Nisbet wrote under the pseudonym of "Don Lemon." He is understood to be now engaged upon a great "World History."

<sup>2</sup> This was in 1516. The family of Orrok (or Orrock) of that ilk, must have been of considerable importance in the West of Fife from the thirteenth to the seventeenth centuries. Their estates of Orrock, Dunearn, and Silliebabie (also Sillibalbie, Selybalbe, and Slebalbe, probably to be identified with the present Balbie, half a mile to the east of Orrock), near Kinghorn-Wester (now Burntisland), are frequently mentioned in the Registrum de Dunfermelyn and in the Retours, Inquis. Spec. from 1248 (Symon de Orroc) until 1686 (Alexander Orrok de Eodem). Orrock is about two miles north-west from Burntisland.

"High Speed in Shorthand: How to attain it." ca. 1897.

These items are all lithographed in shorthand.

<sup>2</sup> B. at Dunfermline ca. 1797; son of David Patton (postea). In early life a weaver, afterwards for a short time a printer with John Miller. About the year 1818, he became a damask-designer, which profession he followed until his death, April 1874. A Swedenborgian, a man of high character and strong individuality; the father of Sir J. <sup>1</sup> Advertised, as above, in the Dunfermline Journal of March 1848; but possibly never printed. From the "Reply" by "A Friend of Man" it appears indeed that Mr. Clark refused to put this item to press.

<sup>2</sup> Son of the immediately preceding; Her Majesty's Limner for Scotland. B. at Dunfermline, Dec. 1821. The arrangement here followed is:—

- I. Literature.
- II. Volumes of Plates, exclusively by him.
- III. Engravings from individual Paintings; but in this latter class no attempt has been made to form an exhaustive list, so many of Sir Noel's works having been engraved.

There is still a fourth group—that of his Book-illustrations, occurring singly or otherwise in various volumes. This class is enumerated under his name in our Appendix B.

- PATON, Sir J. Noel, Kt., LL.D. Notes on Clach-na-Bratach, the Stone of the Standard, &c.

<sup>1</sup> Brother of Sir J. N. Paton; b. at Dunfermline, July 1828; d. at Edin., March 1895. A landscape-painter. In their early years, both he and his brother assisted their father in damask-designing.

<sup>2</sup> Already mentioned as an early Dunfermline printer, commencing to practise the art ca. 1810. Originally a weaver, but afterwards a turner.
He made his own wood-cuts to illustrate his publications:—facing this page is inserted an impression from one of his blocks, which however is not known to have been used for any of his pamphlets. It is said, and doubtless correctly, that he kept the type set up, and printed off copies as required. This must have resulted in more editions than can be chronicled. D. July 1844, in his seventy-eighth year (Henderson's Annals, pp. 652-653). The father of Joseph Neil Paton, senr. Works of his printing are of the greatest rarity.

ca. 1813.

<sup>2</sup> "Craw Club" is said to be the old name for the Dunfermline Curling Club. This may have suggested the title, but there is certainly no further connection between the subjects. Andrew Mercer, as already noted, published four editions of "Proceedings of a Craw Court," 1813 and 1816. Although his first title ante-dates David Patton's (18th April, instead of 4th June), it does not necessarily follow that Mercer was the first to adopt the theme.

<sup>3</sup> Maiden-name, Margaret Agnes Colville, b. at Craigflower; daughter of Andrew Wedderburn Colville of Ochiltree and Crombie, and sister of the late Sir James William Colville of Craigflower. These works were all anonymous, and most of them probably written before her marriage with Mr. (? Kegan) Paul. In 1880 was published by Kegan Paul & Co., "Dorothy, a country story in elegiac verse, with a preface, by A. J. Munby." From the title and publisher's name, this would almost appear to be a metrical version of Miss Colville's "Dorothy."

<sup>2</sup> The Battle of Pitreavie, or "of Inverkeithing," as it is otherwise known, was fought upon the low ground between these two places on Sunday, 20 July 1651. The above print of official despatches, from Cromwell and others, dated 21 and 19 July, shows that the "Protector" was not present, (it is to be noted that he does not write as an eye-witness in his despatch of Monday, 21 July, addressed to the Speaker, from Linlithgow), but that the Parliamentary forces were led by Major-General Har(r)ison, with Colonels Okey, Overton, Daniel, West, &c., and the Royalists by Major-General Sir John Brown, Colonel Scot, and Colonel Buchanan. There had been a preliminary engagement on the morning of the previous Tuesday, when Overton captured the Fort at North-Queensferry "with five great Guns, and in a Bay neare it four "ships laden with Coales, and Salt; in some other Forts neare it we "tooke as many Ordnance as made up those five to be seventeen, "which were planted by the Fyrth side to gall our ships." The Battle of Pitreavie appears to have been an easy victory for the Parliamentary troops;—"the Major Gen: with about six Regiments in all; of Horse, "Foot, and Dragoones marched out, and placed his Foot obscure on "the side of a hill, and advanced further towards the enemy with his "horse, who also were on their march towards him, with full resolu- "tion to engage; there were some small charges with parties, but the "Major Gen: retreated to his foot, using that onely as a meanes to "draw them forward; and being come to his foot, each in Battalia “ charged other, the hottest service was between the left wing of ours, “ and the right wing of theirs, where Col. Okey commanded the Major “ Generalls Regiment of horse, and part of his owne, where the service “ was very hot at the swords point, and specially with Col: Okeyes “ men, who had the left to the left, and were very hardly put to it, “ both in front and flanck, but were seasonably relieved by Captain “ Bramstons Dragoones, who gave very good fire on the enemy, and “ to good purpose, the businesse began about three in the afternoone, “ and continued in its heat a quarter of an hour. Our Word was “ Providence, theirs Scotland, it seemes they were sensible that Scot- “ land lay at this bout much at the stake; Their Army is retreated “ over Sterling, & ours on the advance, the Lord make you and us “ humble and thankfull. The horse being beaten, their foot presently “ threw away their arms; . . . our men had the pursuit of them “ for six miles, their number was about 5000, like to ours; they were “ their picked men both horse and foot, there were about 2000 of them “ slaine, and seven or eight hundred taken.” It is added, “the most “ of their foot are High-landers,” which, from other information, is quite accurate, the Clan Maclean of Duart being largely represented.

Henderson, in his Annals, p. 325, states that the Battle of Pitreavie lasted for eight hours, and that the Highlanders made their final stand under the walls of Pitreavie Castle. It may be incidentally noted that the erection of the old castle or house of Pitreavie dates only some twenty years previous to the battle,—say from ca. 1630-1640.

St. Cuthbert's, which indeed it seems doubtful if he had really left. From 1572 to 1584, a Senator of the College of Justice. D. May 1606, and was interred in St. Cuthbert's Church, Edinburgh.

He was thrice married (first to Catherine, daughter of Masterton of the Grange), and his eldest son, Timothy (b. ca. 1560, d. ca. 1630), became minister of Dunnet, and was an accomplished mathematician and the first projector of a Scottish Atlas, which was issued by Blaeu in 1654: (it may here be noted as probably more than a simple coincidence, that a family of Blaw was distinctly associated with Culross from about the time of the Reformation). Another son, Zachary Pont, was parish-minister of Bower, in Caithness, and married Elizabeth, daughter of John Knox. A daughter, Helen (these were all by the Rev. Robert Pont's first marriage), became the wife of Adam Blackadder of Blairhall; the Culross connection is thus clearly followed out. There is an account of the Rev. Robert Pont in the History of the Church and Parish of St. Cuthbert's, Edinburgh, 1829, pp. 20-41. He assisted in the preparation of the Second Book of Discipline; and in 1601 was appointed by the General Assembly to revise the Psalms.

<sup>1</sup> The Bassandyne Bible has another connection with the West of Fife apart from Pont's "Calendare." The printer (Arbuthnot), upon application to the General Assembly of 1575, received the assistance of George Young, servant to the Abbot of Dunfermline, to correct the proofs and to help him generally. It would appear also that George Young became, in a way, the successor of Arbuthnot, after whose death (Sept. 1585) he obtained full right to Arbuthnot's privileges, (Dobson's History of the Bassandyne Bible, the First Printed in Scotland, with Notices of The Early Printers of Edinburgh, Edin. 1887, pp. 110 and 159).

<sup>1</sup> Locally known as "Prophet Prudit." He was a weaver, resident at St. Leonard's Place, Dunfermline, where the writer remembers seeing his performing mice in wheel-cages, about the year 1861.

<sup>2</sup> During the reign of David I. Queensferry was known as "passagium de Inuirkethin," and it is similarly styled in a charter of Malcolm IV. (Registrum de Dunfermelyn, pp. 7 and 21). In a Bull of Pope Lucius III. (dated Verona, 14 Kal. Nov. 1184,—Ibid., p. 156), is mentioned "Dinidium passagij S. Margarete Regine"; while Chalmers' History, vol. i., p. 88, states the name of Queensferry to first occur in a charter of Malcolm IV. to the monks of Scone, 1164,—"ad portum Regine." The Burgh-seal of South Queensferry bears the inscription Insignia borgi pasagi reginæ (Chalmers' History, vol. ii., plate ix.)

<sup>2</sup> Parish-minister of Cleish, 1843 to 1893. Upon his retirement he lived for two years in Edinburgh, and then for eighteen months at Wolverhampton, where he d. July 1897, aged eighty-one years. He has published more items than the one noted above.

<sup>6</sup> Third son of Rev. John Row, "the Reformer," minister of Perth; baptised, Jan. 1569; schoolmaster at Kennoway, and afterwards for two years, 1590-1592, at Aberdour. Ordained parish-minister of Carnock, 1592; he married, in 1595, Grizel, daughter of the Rev. David Fergusson, Dunfermline. He d. June 1646, and had four sons in the ministry:— David, in Ireland; John, at Aberdeen; Robert, of Abercorn; and William, of Ceres (Scott's Fasti).

Row's "Historie" was founded, as to its earlier years, upon papers written by his father-in-law, the Rev. David Fergusson. It was continued by his second son, Rev. John Row, of Aberdeen (the next author to be noted), and a few additions were also made to the "Coronis," by another (his youngest) son, Rev. William Row of Ceres. In the Maitland Club edition, the whole of the "Coronis" is attributed to the last-named, but see the Wodrow Society edition, p. xv.

<sup>1</sup> Second son of the preceding, born in 1598, evidently at Carnock. He became rector of Kirkcaldy and Perth grammar-schools in succession, and was perhaps the first Hebraist of his day. Parish-minister of Aberdeen (third charge), 1641-ca. 1661. He supported the Covenanted party, and separated from the Church, joining the Independents and ministering in a chapel of that persuasion in Edinburgh; also, it is said, keeping a private school. Principal of King's College, Aberdeen, 1652. D. at Kinnellar ca. 1672. His authorship of the continuation of his father's History has already been mentioned. The above-noted Hebrew Grammar was the first work printed in that language in Scotland.

<sup>3</sup> There is a grave difficulty over the date of St. Serf, unless indeed, upon an unlikely hypothesis, there may have been two Scottish Saints of this name,—the first of them founder of the Church at Culross (being there consecrated Bishop by St. Palladius, ca. 431), many—too many—years afterwards there educating St. Kentigern, and who died ca. 540; and the second, who gave his name to the Priory upon an island in Loch Leven, and died ca. 706. Skene, however (in his Celtic Scotland, vol. ii., pp. 184-5), points out that this involves two Saints Servanus, who each founded "Culenros," and both of whom died on the same day, the 1st of July.

<sup>4</sup> Born in the parish of Leslie; d. Sept. 1810, in his sixty-second year. Minister in 1773 of the (Gillespie) Relief Church, Dunfermline; translated thence to Chapel-shade Church, Dundee, in 1790, where, in the following year, having been deposed by the Relief Synod, he, with the sympathetic majority of his congregation, joined the Establishment, and their church became a chapel-of-ease. Chalmers' History and Henderson's Annals agree in the statement that he was ordained to the Relief Church, Dunfermline, in 1777. On the other hand, his first work bears on its title-page that he was then, 1773, "minister of the Relief Church in Dunfermline." Of course it is possible that, previous to 1777, he was only assistant minister. The Rev. Thomas Gillespie, his predecessor in the charge, d. Jan. 1774.

Surgeon-major in the Royal Grey Dragoons; practised, after his retirement from the army, 1754-1761 or longer, at Dunfermline, thence removing to Edinburgh. D. April 1791. His daughter Susan married David Wardlaw of Netherbeath, and her daughter became the wife of Dr. John Abercrombie. Through these marriages the estate of Netherbeath passed successively to Mrs. Abercrombie, and to her daughter, wife of Rev. John Bruce, D.D. (Chalmers' History, vol. ii). "The Study of Astronomy, &c." London, 1796, seems to be by another author of the same name.

<sup>3</sup> Ordained to the second charge of Dunfermline Abbey, Nov. 1880; promoted to the first charge, 10 July 1893. It may be noted that this latter was the first appointment in the Church of Scotland, after election by ballot, 4 July, in terms of the new regulations enacted by the General Assembly of 1893. The first item under his name is really an advance portion of the second, and was not separately published.

<sup>1</sup> Of Dunearn, near Burntisland; b. 1775, d. at London, Nov. 1849. The most noticeable event in his career was his duel with Sir Alexander Boswell, Bart. Stuart had been the challenger, upon the ground of some anonymous political pasquinades, which appeared in an Edinburgh newspaper, "The Beacon." Stuart was tried in July 1822, but was acquitted.

<sup>2</sup> B. at Limekilns, March 1757; son of Robert Thomson, teacher there, who removed with his family to Banff in 1762, and again to Edinburgh in 1774. In 1780, George Thomson became a clerk to the Board of Trustees for the Encouragement of Art and Manufactures in Scotland, and remained in their service until 1839. During seven years of the following decade he lived in London and Brighton, but in 1849 returned to Edinburgh, and died at Leith, Feb. 1851.

Thomson's name is intimately associated with that of Robert Burns, with whom he had a considerable correspondence. It may be noted that the wife of Charles Dickens was his grand-daughter.

George Thomson had a younger brother, David, born not later than 1765, but whether at Limekilns or at Banff cannot now be verified. He d. in London, 1815, and has edited at least two musical productions,—

"A collection of Mozart's Songs, Duets, &c.,"

"The Melodies of different nations," both of them published through Clementi, London.

(An Irish print of the first portion—25 songs—of Thomson's "Collection," although his name does not appear).

<sup>1</sup> George Thomson took great pains in superintending the issue of this volume, although his assistance is not acknowledged in the work itself, nor is the fact even named in Mrs. Grant's Memoir, published by her son in 1844. This latter omission was keenly felt by Thomson, (Hadden's Life of George Thomson, pp. 34-39).

<sup>2</sup> This is the later title, in a reprint of 1809. The earliest title, of 1793, mentions neither Kozeluch, Haydn, nor Burns; indeed, Haydn's first contribution of Airs to Thomson was in 1800. According to Hadden's Life of George Thomson, p. 87, the new edition (of the first five volumes) was of 1839, but it seems evident that the reprinting was gradual. This, with all the following items, are of course merely published and edited by Thomson.

<sup>1</sup> Second daughter of Sir Charles Halket, the first baronet of Pitfirrane. B. April 1677; married, June 1696, Sir Henry Wardlaw, Bart., of Pitreavie. D. 1727. During part at least of her widowhood, she seems to have resided in the Cross-Wynd, Dunfermline, (Chalmers' History, vol. ii., pp. 301-302, and Henderson's Annals, p. 416).

It was Bishop Percy, in the second edition of his Reliques of Ancient English Poetry (1765), who first announced Lady Wardlaw as the anonymous authoress of Hardyknute,—an identification which is now universally admitted.

There is preserved at Pitfirrane what is supposed to be the holograph MS. of Hardyknute. It is of folio size (in frail condition), and has all the appearance of belonging to Lady Wardlaw's time; in places there are various corrections, and especially in some lines of Stanza xviii. several words have been erased, and others substituted. This is mentioned as showing all the more probability of the MS. having been an original draft.

As this version differs from that usually printed, a verbatim copy of the first Stanza is here appended, together with the same as it appears in the early 12mo. impression, which, according to Letters from Thomas Percy, D.D., afterwards Bishop, &c., &c. (Edin. 1830), p. 4-5, is supposed to have been the very first edition:—

HARDYKNUTE. Stanza I. (MS. at Pitfirrane).

“ An statly stapt he wast the wa & statly stapt he east
“ Full 70 years he now had seen we scarce 7 years o reast
“ He liv'd when Brittons breach of faith wroght Scotland meikle wo
“ An ey his sword teld to ther cost he was ther deadly fo.”

HARDYKNUTE. Stanza I. (12mo. edition. n.d.)

“ And stately stept he East the Wa,
“ and stately stept he West,
“ Full seventy Years he now had seen
“ with scarce seven Years of Rest;
“ He liv'd when Britons Breach of Faith
“ wrought Scotland mickle Wae,
“ And ay his Sword tell'd to their Cost
“ he was their deadly Fae.”

(Note.—The folio of 1719 runs in similar terms, as also the Glasgow editions of 1745 and 1748, except that the two latter contain somewhat affected archaisms).

According to Chalmers' History, vol. i., p. 301, the Wardlaw family received estates in Galloway from Malcolm III. in the eleventh century, but, having sided with Baliol, lost these when Robert the Bruce came to the throne. The Wardlaw of that time retained, however, the lands of Torrie in Fife, which had been a more recent acquisition of the family. Sir Henry Wardlaw of Torrie was the father of Cardinal

Walter Wardlaw (who d. ca. 1389) and the grandfather of Bishop Henry Wardlaw (nephew of the Cardinal), tutor to James I., and (afterwards) founder of St. Andrews University in 1411. The Wardlaws held, besides Torrie, much land in the neighbourhood, including Wester-Luscar, Wester-Lochore (or Inchgall), Balmule, Logie, and Pitreavie. Sir Henry Wardlaw, the first Wardlaw of Pitreavie, was born in 1565, eldest son of Sir Cuthbert Wardlaw of Balmule, inheriting the last-named estate and adding that of Pitreavie by purchase in 1608 (Ibid., vol. i., pp. 301-303; vol. ii., p. 263; Sibbald's Fife, pp. 145-148, etc.)

<sup>1</sup> Of this folio edition only two copies are now positively known to exist; one (a fine tall specimen) in the Advocates' Library, and the other (from Bishop Percy's collection) in the library of Mr. William Macmath, Edinburgh, who is a specialist in Ballad Literature. What may be a third copy (formerly Dr. Clerk's) is mentioned in Bishop Percy's Letters, &c., Edin. 1830, p. 5; and James Paterson used one in his possession for the reprint in The Ballads and Songs of Ayrshire, 1847.

 ———. M'Ritchie and others v. Earl of Rosebery and others. 4to. 1802.

<sup>2</sup> This estate was sold by James Kellock to Sir Henry Wardlaw of Balmule in 1608. From the Wardlaws it passed to the Earl of Rosebery in 1703, but remained in his lordship's possession for only eight years, when he sold it to Sir Robert Blackwood. In 1582 Pitreavie seems to have been but a small estate, and quite separate from Masterton, the owners being respectively, Robert Kellock and — Cant; but in 1617 Sir Henry Wardlaw had acquired (part of) Masterton, Primrose, &c. Pitreavie was erected into a Barony, 1614, and Masterton, Primrose, and "St. Margaret's Town" were conjoined into the same Barony in 1626.

The above notes are entirely taken from these law-prints. The first Sir Henry Wardlaw of Pitreavie was only a Knight, but the second of the same name was created a Baronet by Charles I. in 1631. Until about the time of the Reformation it is said that the whole estate of Pitreavie belonged to a chaplainry in St. Giles' Church, Edinburgh (Chalmers' History, vol. i., pp. 223 and 455).

APPENDIX B.

ENGRAVINGS, &c., OF THE DISTRICT, OR BY LOCAL ARTISTS (WHERE NOT INCLUDED IN THE PRECEDING CATALOGUE); ALSO PORTRAITS; AND MAPS OF WEST FIFE.

Note.—These are chiefly contained in Topographical works upon Scotland generally. Illustrated books of a purely local nature,—and even those relating particularly to the County of Fife,—are indexed under their own special heading. In cases where the same item contains views of Dunfermline and also of other places in the West of Fife, it is usually indexed under DUNFERMLINE, and a note given of the other local engravings.

- . "The Palace," with 6 pp. letterpress, in A. H. Millar's "The Historical Castles and Mansions of Scotland. Perthshire and Forfarshire." sm. 4to. Paisley, 1890.
(See also under CULROSS, in main catalogue).
- . (Also Dunfermline and Inverkeithing), in "Scottish Market Crosses." By John W. Small. Folio. Stirling, 1900.
- DONIBRISTLE. View, with one page of letterpress, in Thos. H. Shepherd's "Modern Athens, Displayed in a series of views, &c." 4to. London, 1829.
(See also under ABERDOUR, in main catalogue).
- <sup>2</sup> DUNFERMLINE. Theatrum Scotiæ, &c., by John Slezer, contains two large engravings of Dunfermline, and two of Culross. sm. folio. London, 1693.
- . Another edition. The same four plates, with a dedication added below the title of each. sm. folio. London, 1718.
(These two editions have the plates folded).
- . Another edition. Folio. London, 1718.
(Four plates as above, but unfolded).

<sup>2</sup> John Slezer was a Dutchman by birth, but became a captain in H.B.M.'s Artillery. He was encouraged in making this collection by Charles II., James II., and William III., and received a small subsidy from the Scottish Parliament. D. June 1714. Of the 1693 edition it appears that 175 copies were printed (25 of these upon large paper), and that the plates were engraved in Holland. They cost Slezer £7 each,—£2 for the sketch, £4 10s for engraving, and 10s additional for the insertion of figures. The bibliography of the Theatrum Scotiæ is distinctly interesting. (See Edin. Bibliog. Soc., vol. iii., part iii.)

Appendix B.

DUNFERMLINE. Theatrum Scotiae, &c. Another edition.
Folio. London, 1719.

(This does not contain the above-mentioned plates, but has "Culrosse House" for the first time).

———. Another edition. With a Life of Slezer by Rev.
John Jamieson, D.D. Folio. Edin. 1814.

(This has all the five plates).

———. Another edition. Folio. Edin. 1874.

(This reprint has all five plates, but is lithographed).

DUNFERMLINE. Les Delices de la Grand' Bretagne, & de l'Irlande; &c. Par James Beeverell. "Nouvelle edition" (the second, the first being of 1707). 8 vols.
Leyden, 1727.

(Vol. vi. contains two plates of Culross and one of Dunfermline,—much reduced copies from Slezer's
Theatrum Scotiae).

<sup>1</sup> DUNFERMLINE. Views of the Principal Towns, Castles, Abbeys, &c., in Scotland, on thirty-five plates: &c.
Folio. London, 1797.

(With Slezer's five plates, as already enumerated.
Notwithstanding the title, this contains sixty-five plates in all; sixty-one of these being Slezer's, and four engraved by Pouncy).

DUNFERMLINE. A Tour in Scotland. By Thomas Pennant.
3 vols.

4to. Warrington, Chester, London, 1774-1776.

[Contains one view of Inchcolm Abbey (J. Falconer) and two of Dunfermline Abbey (one by M.
Griffith)].

<sup>2</sup> DUNFERMLINE. The Virtuosi's Museum; containing Select Views, &c., by Paul Sandby.
Oblong 4to. London, 1778-1781.

(Contains a copperplate "View of the Royal Palace and Abbey of Dunfermling").

<sup>1</sup> This volume consists chiefly of Slezer's views, but with others of St. Andrews (drawn by J. Oliphant) added. It ought almost to be considered as another edition of the Theatrum Scotiae. Although titled "Thirty-five" plates, it really contains sixty-five, which are fully enumerated upon the self-same page.

<sup>2</sup> Sandby has probably published other views of the locality; see under ABERDOUR.

Appendix B.

DUNFERMLINE. The New British Traveller ; or A Complete Modern Universal Display of Great-Britain and Ireland : &c., &c. By G. A. Walpoole.

Folio. London, 1784.

(Contains one view of Dunfermline, copied from Slezer).

<sup>1</sup> DUNFERMLINE. Picturesque Antiquities of Scotland. Part I., Religious Houses. Part II., Castles. (25 etchings, in sepia, in each part). By Adam de Cardonnel.

4to. London, 1788.

(Two of Inchcolm, one of Culross, and two of Dunfermline).

———. Another edition. Part I. (25). Part II. (25). Parts III. & IV. (53). 103 etchings in black.

8vo. London, 1788-1793.

(Including the above five, and another of Lochore Castle).

———. Another edition. Parts I. & II. (51). Parts III. & IV. (52). 103 etchings in black. 2 vols.

4to. London, 1788-1793.

(Including the six plates as above).

4to. London, 1789-1791.

(Vol. ii. contains three views of Dunfermline, one each of Rosyth, Culross, and Lochore Castle, and three of Inchcolm).

[Published by Hooper, engraved by Sparrow and Newton].

<sup>1</sup> These etchings are small—only 2½ by 3¼ inches—but beautifully executed. The earlier impressions (apparently including all of the sepia tint) are exquisite, (? do all the 103 plates so exist), but the work has evidently been reprinted at various times, and the black impressions are also found upon inferior paper, and with at least three separate settings of the letterpress.

<sup>2</sup> There was evidently a large paper edition, with the engravings hand-coloured. The writer has several of the plates in this condition.

Appendix B.

- ‡ DUNFERMLINE. Thirty-six Views in Scotland, chiefly from Drawings by J. C., Esq. (John Clerk of Eldin), with Descriptions. Oblong 4to. London, 1791.
(Two of Dunfermline, and one each of Rosyth, Tulliallan, and Culross. Engraved by Robertson and Pyet).
(See also in folio vol. of 1825, postea).
- DUNFERMLINE. A Selection of Views in Scotland. Vol. I. (all published). (Sub-title, "Twenty-five Views in the Southern part of Scotland, from a Collection of Drawings made by James Moore, &c.")
4to. London, 1794.
(Contains two of Dunfermline Abbey).
- DUNFERMLINE. A Journey from Edinburgh through parts of North Britain: &c., &c. By Alexander Campbell. 2 vols. 4to. London, 1802.
(Contains a tinted engraving of Dunfermline Abbey, and another of Inverkeithing Bay).
- DUNFERMLINE. Scotia Depicta, &c., illustrated in a series of finished Etchings by James Fittler . . . from accurate Drawings made on the spot by John Claude Nattes. Folio. London, 1804.
(Includes one of "Dunfermline Abby and Mill").
- DUNFERMLINE. The Beauties of Scotland: &c., by R. Forsyth. 5 vols. London, 1805-1808.
[Vol. iv. has two views of Dunfermline Abbey (same as in Moore's "Twenty-five Views," antea), and another of Inchcolm].
- DUNFERMLINE. The Border Antiquities of England and Scotland; &c. By (Sir) Walter Scott. 2 vols. 4to. London, 1814-1817.
(Has one view of Dunfermline Abbey, from a painting by G. Arnald).

---

‡ There is a series of Select Views of Picturesque Scenery in Scotland, &c., "published by George Walker, Drawing Academy, Hunter's Square, Edinburgh," (London, 1794), oblong 4to.; but whether of separate engravings or bound in volume form the writer cannot say. This series seems to include two of these drawings—Dunfermline Abbey from the glebe, and Tully Allan Castle, with the same engravers' signatures—as also an early impression of Clerk of Eldin's "Abbey of Dunfermline" (engraved by E. Mitchel) and a view, upon a large scale, of the "Castle of Inch Garvey," engraved by D. B. Pyet.

Appendix B.

DUNFERMLINE. Monastic and Baronial Remains, &c., &c.
By G. J. Parkyns. 2 vols. London, 1816.

(Contains two small tinted plates of Dunfermline Abbey).

DUNFERMLINE. Etchings, chiefly of Views in Scotland.
By John Clerk, of Eldin. (1773-1779).

Folio. Bannatyne Club, Edin. 1825.

(Includes one of Dunfermline).

[See also in "Thirty-six Views," 4to., of 1791, antea].

———. Another edition.

Folio. Bannatyne Club, Edin. 1855.

[Comprises views of North Queensferry (Plate xv.),
Rosyth Castle, and Dunfermline (Plate xvi.),
Blairadam, and Lochore Castle (Plate xviii.), Inchcolm (Plate xxxix.), Otterstone Castle (Plate l.), and Culross Abbey (Plate li.)]

DUNFERMLINE, Nine Engravings of the Abbey Church and Palace of. "Engraved by John Johnstone."

4to. Edin. (1829).

DUNFERMLINE. Select Views of the Royal Palaces of Scotland, from drawings by William Brown, Glasgow; with illustrative descriptions . . . by Rev.
John Jamieson, D.D. 4to. Edin. 1830.

(Has a view of Dunfermline Palace).

DUNFERMLINE. Scenes in Scotland, with Historical Illustrations and Biographical Anecdotes. By John Leighton.
8vo. Glasgow, 1831.

(Includes one very small plate of Dunfermline).

[Another edition of this volume, but partially rewritten by James H. Brown, was issued by the same publishers in 1833].

DUNFERMLINE. The Gazetteer of Scotland. By Robert and William Chambers. 2 vols. 8vo. Edin. 1832.

[Has one plate of Dunfermline, drawn by William Geikie ("published by Thos. Ireland, Junr.")]

<sup>1</sup> These are excellent engravings, and were also issued in 1834, bound up with Andrew Mercer's "Historical and Chronological Table."
The date, 1829, is taken from a large paper copy of one of the original series.

Appendix B.

DUNFERMLINE. Causeries sur l'Ecosse ; or, Chit-chat upon Scotland, with twelve lithographic drawings on India paper, &c. By J. Ulric. Folio. Edin. 1833.
(Contains two very poorly executed views of Dunfermline Monastery and Abbey).

DUNFERMLINE. Sketches of Scenes in Scotland, drawn in outline by Lieut.-Col. Murray, yr. of Ochertyre, &c. 4to. Perth, (1834).
(With two lithographs of Dunfermline Abbey).

DUNFERMLINE. The Tales of a Grandfather, in Sir Walter Scott's Prose Works. 7 vols. 12mo. R. Cadell, Edin. 1836.

[Vignette in vol. i. (vol. xxii. of the whole series) of Dunfermline, by J. M. W. Turner, engraved by J. Horsburgh].

(The same plate does duty in Black's Picturesque Tourist of Scotland, eighteenth edition, 1867).

DUNFERMLINE. Caledonia Illustrated in a series of Views taken expressly for the Work, by W. H. Bartlett, T. Allom, and others. The Descriptive Text by William Beattie, M.D. 2 vols. 4to. London. n.d.
(Contains a good plate of "The New Church and Abbey, Dunfermline," drawn by T. Allom, engraved by H. Griffiths).

[The first edition was of 1838].

DUNFERMLINE. Scotland Illustrated in a series of Eighty Views, &c. 4to. London, &c., 1845.

[Contains three engravings of Dunfermline, and one each of Broomhall and Burntisland ; one of these, of Dunfermline Palace, is reprinted from Brown's Select Views of the Royal Palaces of Scotland (supra), and the other four from Leighton's History of the County of Fife, . . . with numerous engravings . . . by Joseph Swan ; from original drawings . . . by James Stewart, 3 vols., 4to., Glasgow, 1840 (already indexed under FIFE)].

(Note.—Another edition, of 1850, differs somewhat. One of the above engravings also appears in Fullarton's Gazetteer of Scotland, 2 vols., large 8vo., Glasgow, 1842 ; Leighton's History of Fife includes two additional views of Dunfermline, and one each of Donibristle and Inchcolm).

Appendix B.

DUNFERMLINE. The Baronial and Ecclesiastical Antiquities of Scotland: illustrated by Robert William Billings. 4 vols. 4to. Edin. 1845-1852.

the North of England. Folio. London, 1726.
(Contains an engraving of a sculptured pillar-stone, ten feet high, now entirely lost).

<sup>1</sup>The sculptured stone for which this entry is made is evidently that described in the New Stat. Acc., vol. ix., p. 239,—“In the north part of the parish, there is a stone 10 feet high, 2½ broad, and 1 thick, with rude figures of men and horses cut upon it, but now much defaced, supposed to be a Danish monument.” Chalmers' History, vol. ii., p. 389, explains the disappearance of this relic,—“There was not very long ago a large upright stone, with various figures on it, which stood on the side of the old high-road from Queensferry northward, not far from the old mansion-house of Duloch, and the west lodge of Fordel, described in the last Statistical Account of Inverkeithing Parish. But when this road was abandoned, on the new one being opened, several years since, the stone was found to be an obstruction to some field improvements, and was removed and broken down for road metal.” (1)

---

<sup>1</sup> Son of the Rev. George Abercrombie; b. at Aberdeen, Oct. 1780, d. at Edinburgh, Nov. 1844. In 1808 he married Agnes, daughter of David Wardlaw of Netherbeath (or Swinton's Beath), through whom he inherited that estate, and thus comes into our list. His daughter, Susan, married the Rev. John Bruce, D.D., who afterwards succeeded to Netherbeath, and is accordingly also noted, postea. (Chalmers' History, vol. ii., pp. 306, 457-458).

<sup>3</sup> B. at South Piteddie, parish of Kinghorn, May 1778. Educated at Lochgelly School, and afterwards a teacher there, as also later in Edinburgh. Joining the Burgher section of the Associate Church, he was ordained to Stonehaven in 1805. D. Nov. 1830 (M'Kerrow's History of the Secession Church).

<sup>2</sup> Methodist minister at Dunfermline in 1818. He was evidently also the author of "The Position of the Wesleyans," ca. 1847, (British Museum Catalogue).

<sup>4</sup> B. at Huddersfield. Pastor of the Congregational Chapel, Dunfermline, Oct. 1882 to Nov. 1889. Mr. Binns then accepted a call to Redfern Congregational Church, Sydney, N.S.W., a charge which he still holds. He has also published at Sydney, "Congregational Endeavour Three Centuries Ago," 1896.

<sup>6</sup> B. at Irvine, 1593. Licensed, 1616; Presbyterian minister at Bangor, Ireland, 1623-1631, in which latter year he was suspended, and in 1634 deposed. At Ayr in 1638, and at St. Andrews, 1639, whence he was ejected in 1662 and inhibited from coming within twenty miles of that city. For the last six months of his life he resided at Meikle Couston, near Aberdour, dying there, Aug. 1666. He was father-in-law to the Rev. William Row of Ceres, and grandfather of the Rev. Robert Blair, author of "The Grave, a Poem."

<sup>8</sup> Universalist preacher. B. at Glasgow in 1846, and for about eight years pastor of the "Church of the Messiah" (Universalist) at Dunfermline; resident, during part at least of that period, in Bothwell Place. Mr. Bowie has also published two selections of songs—"Fire-side Lyrics" and "The Laverock"—both of them probably printed in Glasgow, where he seems to have latterly lived, (Edwards' Modern Scottish Poets).

<sup>5</sup> B. near Dunkeld; educated at the High School, Dunfermline. For nearly seven years second Classical master in Dundee High School (being there, by a curious coincidence, colleague to his namesake, John Clark, who is mentioned in the main catalogue as a native of Limekilns). Then for four years headmaster of Culross School; from Jan. 1896 senior English master in Glasgow High School until promoted in 1900 to be "visitor" (or "inspector general") of all the Glasgow schools.

<sup>3</sup> A native of Hamilton, ordained 1848; was the first minister of the Evangelical Union Church in Dunfermline, inducted Jan. 1855. Here he only remained for about two years, removing to London, where in 1858 he was minister of Queen Street Congregational Chapel, Ratcliff. About the year 1870 he returned to Scotland, and became pastor first at Newburgh (Fife) and then at Selkirk, in each place for only a very few years. Upon his resignation of the Selkirk charge, he went to Edinburgh, where he d. Feb. 1890.

<sup>4</sup> B. Dec. 1842 at Kirkconnel, in Dumfries-shire. Ordained, Oct. 1870, to Queen Anne Street U.P. Church, Dunfermline. Translated to Derby Road Church, Bootle, Aug. 1872. D. Oct. 1872.

<sup>5</sup> The connection of this author with the district was very slight. It is said that he wrote part of his continuation of this Memoir in Dunfermline, 1860-1861.

<sup>6</sup> Ordained to Whithorn Associate Church, Feb. 1835; translated, Jan. 1841, to Maygate Church, Dunfermline. This charge he demitted in 1847, going to Brechin, whence he removed to Canada in 1856. D. at New York, April 1860 (Mackelvie's Annals). He taught for a time in the school at Limekilns.

<sup>4</sup> Merely a political skit. Mr. Hastie was born at Glasgow, April 1805; a merchant there; Lord-provost in 1846, and twice M.P. for the city. In November 1863 he purchased Carnock estate, and died at Luscar House, Aug. 1864, within a very few days of taking possession.

<sup>5</sup> A celebrated Scottish divine of the seventeenth century. B. in the parish of Creich, Fifeshire, ca. 1583; d. at Edinburgh, Aug. 1646. His name is here included since he is understood to have been a cadet of the Hendersons of Fordell (and indeed was buried in what is said to be their ground in Greyfriars Churchyard, Edinburgh), although probably not a very immediate connection. He was especially prominent in the negotiations between Charles I. and the Kirk of Scotland.

<sup>3</sup> Son of the Rev. Richard Jerment, who afterwards became minister of the Antiburgher Church at Burntisland. B. at Peebles, Oct. 1759 (whence his father removed in 1769), but resident for about ten years at Burntisland. Ordained colleague to Rev. David Wilson in a Secession Church in London, Sept. 1782 (Bow Lane, afterwards Oxenden Street), and succeeded to the full charge in 1784. D. May 1819, in his sixtieth year (Mackelvie's Annals).

<sup>1</sup> B. in 1779; for a number of years kept a school in New Row, Dunfermline, but left for Inverness in 1816, having purchased the "Inverness Courier." Upon the re-sale of this newspaper (which had evidently proved unprofitable), Mr. and Mrs. Johnstone removed to Edinburgh, where about 1827 they became joint-editors of "The Edinburgh Weekly Chronicle," given up in its turn for "The Schoolmaster," a weekly journal (Aug. 1832 to June 1833), merged into "Johnstone's Edinburgh Magazine" as a monthly (Sept. 1833 to May 1834). This latter was incorporated with "Tait's Edinburgh Magazine," edited by Mr. Johnstone from June 1834 until 1846. He died, Nov. 1857, surviving his wife by only two months.

<sup>2</sup> Wife of the immediately preceding, whom she married about the year 1812. She was born in Fife in 1781, and very early in life had married a Mr. M'Leish, whom she was compelled to divorce (Conolly's Biog. Dict.) D. at Edinburgh, Aug. 1857.

Her first work, "The Saxon and the Gael," published in 1814, and now excessively rare, was (according to Henderson's Annals) written during 1813 in a house in New Row, opposite the end of Canmore Street. Mrs. Johnstone is best known by her "Meg Dods' Cookery," of which the first edition was published at Edin. 1826. This has often been reprinted, and is even yet issued as a standard work, existing in at least sixteen editions. The fourth of these (Edin. 1829) contains a "Glossary of the more unfrequent culinary terms, &c.," of which an evident first draft is written upon some waste pages at the end of the original MS. "Minutes of the Pamphlet Club, Dunfermline," kept by Mr. Johnstone, and noted in this catalogue under DUNFERMLINE,—SOCIETIES. "Poems, by Robert Nicoll," were dedicated to Mrs. Johnstone, in whose house at Edinburgh the author died, and to whom grateful reference is made in his Memoirs.

Occasionally resident at Limekilns, although probably not to the same extent as his brother. Ordained U.P. minister at Arbroath, 1860; translated to Parliamentary Road, Glasgow, 1871; afterwards Professor of New Testament Literature and Exegesis in the U.P. College, Edinburgh. He and the Rev. T. B. Johnstone, D.D.—cousins—have added a final "e" to their surname, which is accordingly thus given.

<sup>2</sup> B. 1753-4; parish-minister of Keith Hall and Kinkell, 1778 to 1822, and thence translated to Tulliallan upon the presentation of Viscount Keith, July 1822. D. March 1823, exactly a week later than his patron. It is to be noted that probably only one of his works was composed at Tulliallan.

<sup>1</sup> An eminent judge (son of Allan Maconochie, the first Lord Meadowbank); b. 1777, d. 1861. He succeeded in 1854 to the Pitliver and Garvock estates through his mother, who was Elizabeth, third daughter of Robert Welwood, advocate. This second Lord Meadowbank was a prominent patron of Art, and also, as a member of the Bannatyne Club, joined with Sir George Clerk of Penicuik in presenting to the members the Registrum Cartarum Sancti Egidii de Edinburg, 1859. His heir in the above-named estates was Allan Alexander Maconochie-Welwood, b. 1806, Professor of Laws in Glasgow University. Pitliver still belongs to a representative of the same family, but Garvock has been acquired by the Dunfermline Guildry.

<sup>3</sup> B. at Ormiston, East Lothian, Dec. 1795. In 1797 his parents removed to Portsoy, where his father had received an appointment in the Customs. In 1806 they had again removed to Carron Shore, and our author was apprenticed to a gardener at Polmont, 1809-1812. Dr. Moffat's father was for fifty years in the Customs service, and was resident for at least twenty-seven years (from 1811) at Inverkeithing in an official capacity. Robert Moffat, after leaving Polmont, served for a year or more (1812-1814) in the gardens at Donibristle (whence his connection with our district), and then left for a similar engagement in England. In Sept. 1816, he was (with eight others, including John Williams, afterwards the martyr of Erromanga) set apart for missionary work, and to this he devoted his life, remaining in Africa until 1870. D. Aug. 1883. His daughter became the wife of the famous Dr. Livingstone.

<sup>5</sup> Licensed by the presbytery of Annan, 1831; assistant at Alloa, 1835; ordained to the parish of Tulliallan, Aug. 1836; translated to Peebles, Aug. 1847.

<sup>1</sup> Son of Hugh Monro of Fryesh; admitted to the second charge of Dunfermline parish, April 1673; translated thence to Kinglassie, March 1676, and again to Wemyss, June 1678. This last-named charge he demitted in 1682 upon being appointed Professor of Divinity in St. Mary's College, St. Andrews. In Dec. 1685 became Principal of Edinburgh University, and was also minister of the second charge of the High Kirk, Edinburgh, 1686-1689. Deprived of his office in the University, Sept. 1690, having previously resigned his ministerial position. In his latter years he officiated in an Episcopalian meeting-house in Edinburgh; d. in that city, 1715, (Scott's Fasts, and Chalmers' History, vol. i., p. 545).

<sup>2</sup> This family was one of importance in Fifeshire during about four centuries, dating from at least 1444, but probably from a still earlier period. In the year mentioned, Richard Multrare of Markinch (and Seafield Tower) acquired a tack of a "hale quarter of thir twa Pet-donyngis," &c., in Fife (Reg. Mag. Sig.), and his great-grandson, John Multrare, was killed at Flodden in 1513. The name was anciently written "Moutray," as well as in other forms (being, no doubt, originally "Multerer," or Miller), and occurs as of Seafield in 1543 (Registrum de Dunfermelyn) and of Seafield and Newton of Markinch in 1609 (Retours, Inquis. Speciales). Robert Moutray, in 1631, sold his estate of Seafield to Archbishop Law of Glasgow for 19,700 merks, and (probably in the same year) acquired instead the lands of Rescobie, near Dunfermline. (The first of the name known in Scotland was Adam de Multre in 1292, who probably lived at Moutray Hill, now the site of the Edinburgh Register House).

James Moultrie, grandson of the purchaser of Rescobie, succeeded his father (James) in that estate in 1686 (Ibid.): he died in 1710, leaving two sons,—James (of Rescobie), and John, for a time resident at Culross, where in 1702 was born to him a son, John, who emigrated to Carolina in 1729. This John Moultrie (the emigrant, and apparently a doctor) d. 1771, having had five sons, the eldest of whom, John, came over from America in 1746 to study at Edinburgh for his degree of M.D., but afterwards held the office of Lieut.-Governor of East Florida, under the British Crown, at the time of the War of Independence. Fort Moultrie was named after his brother William, a General in the American Army. (These details are obtained partly from Historical Collections of Kinghorn, pp. 24-26, and more especially from MS. notes kindly contributed by the Rev. Walter MacLeod, Edinburgh; also from the "Rules of St. Andrew's Society, of the City of Charleston, S.C.," 1892).

In the folio description of Blairadam (The Progress of an Estate, &c.), it is mentioned that the farm and mansion-house of Woodend, in Fife, were purchased by William Adam of Blairadam in 1738, and that Woodend had previously been the residence of the "family of Moutray of Rescobie." The estate of Rescobie was entirely relinquished by the Moultrie family in 1801.

The Rev. George Moultrie (second son of Dr. John Moultrie, Lieut.-Governor of East Florida) was father of the Rev. John Moultrie (b. 1799, d. 1874), Rector of Rugby and Canon of Worcester, who won considerable fame as a minor poet. The above entry has been made both to allow the facts of the Moultrie connection to be noted, and particularly to make mention of this author, although his descent from the James Moultrie of Rescobie (who d. 1710), while direct, is certainly remote, being of the fourth generation. The Poems of the Rev. John Moultrie have appeared in various forms, the latest and most complete edition (with a Memoir by Prebendary Coleridge) being in 2 vols., London, 1876.

(see Memorials of Johnston, p. 21), and there composed part of the poem through which his name has become familiar. Pollok afterwards spent three months (October to December 1826) in Dunfermline, where—according to independent accounts, both of them probably correct—in the High Street or Queen Anne Street he completed and transcribed his “Course of Time” (Memoir of Rev. John Macfarlane, LL.D., p. 54, and Life of Pollok, Edin. 1843, pp. 313 to 316). He d. near Southampton Sept. 1827. Besides “The Course of Time” (which has recently been stated upon authority to have passed through more than thirty editions), Pollok wrote “Tales of the Covenanters,” Edin. 1833, first published anonymously in three parts, under separate titles.

<sup>3</sup> B. 1802. Ordained to a Presbyterian Church in Liverpool, ca. 1823; inducted parish-minister of Aberdour in 1842, and of Dalgety in 1844. He is understood to have published at least one work, probably at Liverpool. D. Sept. 1854.

<sup>4</sup> B. at Edinburgh, March 1819, and now again resident there. United States Consular Agent at Dunfermline, 1890-1897. The “Fifty Years” and “Eighty Years” commemorate Mr. Reid’s golden wedding, and the completion of his eightieth year.

<sup>5</sup> B. near Ceres, but educated at Dunfermline, his parents having removed to Brucefield when Mr. Renton was nine years of age. Now schoolmaster at Macduff.

A large proportion of the published works of Dr. Ross come into this catalogue under individual local headings,—so distinctly, indeed, that their association with the district is much more by subject than by authorship.

Born in Holland, 1744, eldest son of Captain (afterwards Lieut.-Colonel) Robert Stedman and Antoinetta Cristina van Ceulen; grand-son of Rev. John Stedman (b. 1678, d. 1713; “of Baldrige” through his marriage with Jean Kinnaird, grand-daughter of Robert Welwood), parish-minister of Dalmeny, and afterwards of the Tron Church, Edinburgh. The father of John Gabriel Stedman was an officer of the Scots Brigade in the service of the Dutch States-General, into which our author also entered (as Ensign) in 1760, being ultimately raised to the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel upon his retirement in 1783. D. at Tiverton, March 1797, from the effects of an accident, (Gentleman's Magazine, 1797; Scott's Fasti; Scots Brigade in Holland, vol. ii., Scot. Hist. Soc.; also from notes kindly contributed by Mr. John James Dalgleish of Brankston Grange).

John Gabriel Stedman was a nephew of the John Stedman, M.D., mentioned in our main catalogue. Chalmers' History, vol. ii., devotes six pages to the Stedman family, and also gives a pedigree.

Note.—“C. Stedman” was the nom-de-plume of Dr. William Thomson, who wrote A History of the American War, London, 1794. (This according to the Advocates' Library Catalogue).

<sup>2</sup> Professor of Clinical Surgery in Edinburgh University. Son of John Syme, W.S., of Cartmore, Kinross-shire, and Lochore, Fife. B. at Edinburgh, Nov. 1799, his early years being spent in Kinross-shire. His father sold the estate of Lochore in 1813, and rented Pitreavie Castle, near Dunfermline, from that period until his death in 1821. In 1817, James Syme invented the system of waterproofing which was patented by (and named after) Charles Macintosh in 1823. D. June 1870. "Memorials" of his life, by Robert Paterson, M.D., were published in 1874.

<sup>3</sup> Surgeon, successor to Robert Brown, M.D., in Dunfermline, where he practised ca. 1878-1881. D. at Birmingham, Sept. 1896.

<sup>5</sup> For about seven years, until 1862 (when he left for Newcastle-upon-Tyne), parish-minister of Mossgreen (quoad sacra), during which period he resided at Dunfermline, Aberdour, and Inverkeithing. About the year 1868 was elected M.P. for the Kilmarnock Burghs, but resigned owing to general objections being taken to a minister of the Established Church holding at the same time a seat in the House of Commons. Presented (as above stated) to Queensferry Parish in 1871, but was not accepted by the Presbytery. Now of Ladywell, Glasgow.

<sup>2</sup> Son of Jasper Wallace, Dunimarle; born at Ceres, June 1831; educated at the Geddes School, Culross. Ordained parish-minister of Newton-on-Ayr in 1857; translated thence to Trinity College Church, Edinburgh, 1860, and again to Old Greyfriars in 1868. Professor of Church History in Edinburgh University, 1872-1876. He resigned the clerical profession in 1876, and became editor of "The Scotsman," Aug. 1876 to Nov. 1880. Afterwards a barrister, and M.P. for East Edinburgh from 1886 until his death in 1899. Dr. Wallace also printed a single Sermon on "Ministerial Communion," and an Address to the Edinburgh Burns Club. D. June 1899.

<sup>3</sup> B. Feb. 1733; d. Jan. 1805. Provost of Dunfermline, 1755-1758, which seems to have been almost his sole connection with the district. Afterwards went to London, and became successively Solicitor-General, Attorney-General, Lord Chief Justice, Lord Privy Seal, and Lord High Chancellor. Created Baron Loughborough, 1780; Earl of Rosslyn, 1801.

<sup>5</sup> The family of Walwod or Welwood has been connected with Dunfermline since at least the beginning of the fifteenth century,—from the earliest, indeed, of the extant Records. The first occurrence of the name seems to indicate it to be a territorial one, derived from their property about a mile north of Dunfermline. (It was not until about the twelfth or thirteenth century that surnames first came into use in Scotland, and these were originally descriptive, whether as to property, descent, occupation, or some personal peculiarity).

From 1566 are found the Walwoods of Touch (church lands), while in 1704 (if not earlier) they also acquired the lands of Garvock, or Garvock Wood; in 1721, those of Middle Baldrige; and in 1736 the estate of Pitliver.

It is understood that the Rev. Andrew Welwood (author of "A Glimpse of Glory," &c.) and James Welwood, M.D. (author of "Memoirs . . . for the last Hundred Years preceding the Revolution in 1688," &c.)—sons of Rev. James Welwood, minister of Tundergarth—were descendants from this branch; as was also probably William Welwood (author of "An Abridgment of all Sea-Laws," 1613, &c.) But none of these are here definitely noted, since the exact connection cannot be proved, and may indeed be somewhat remote,—as in the case of Bishop Hacket and the Pitfirrane family. A more recent representative was Alexander Maconochie-Welwood, second Lord Meadowbank, whom see, antea.

<sup>2</sup> B. near Muthil, 1794. Licensed by the Secession Church, and received no fewer than eleven calls, including one to Limekilns (where he was resident at least 1823-1824) and two to Queen Anne Street Church, Dunfermline. Over the latter there was great dissension during about four years, 1820-1824, solved by Mr. Whyte's final withdrawal from the Secession Church and emigration to America in 1825, where he was ordained to the charge of Salem, New York, in July of the same year. D. there, Dec. 1827.
